EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1. Introduction

As at December 2017, the population of Malta was estimated to be 475 701, of whom 240 599 were male and 235 102 were female.<sup>1</sup> Of the total population, 67 145 were foreign nationals. According to the Labour Force Survey, the number of people employed at the end of December 2018 was estimated at 239 427, of whom 142 229 were male and 97 198 were female.<sup>2</sup> Given the increased number of foreign nationals living in Malta in recent years, there has also been an increase in the number of incidents of racial intolerance.

Various organisations in Malta, both governmental and non-governmental, actively seek to combat discrimination on various grounds. Besides the measures taken to implement the directives, the Government continues to seek dialogue and consultation with people and entities working to combat and prohibit discrimination.

It is important to note that, in December 2014, a consultation process was launched<sup>3</sup> proposing the introduction of an Equality Act and legislation for a Human Rights and Equality Commission. The Equality Act is proposed to supersede the current Maltese Equality for Men and Women Act, which no longer serves its purpose, as its distinctions in providing for different grounds have created an unwanted hierarchy of grounds. The new Equality Act is being proposed so as to present a less fragmented equality legal framework in Malta, and it also introduces provisions on intersectionality.<sup>4</sup> The ultimate aim of this proposed Equality Act is to have all the relevant provisions of the following EU Directives included within one, comprehensive act of legislation: Directive 2000/43/EC, Directive 2000/78/EC, Directive 2004/113/EC and Directive 2006/54/EC. On 10 December 2015, International Human Rights Day, the Ministry for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties presented drafts of the two aforementioned bills during a public seminar. These bills were open for the last round of public consultation prior to presentation to Parliament. The consultation process ended on 31 January 2016. The respective bills were presented in Parliament in 2017, but are still in the process of enactment. There is no publicly available information to show that there is opposition to the introduction of these laws.

The proposed legislative framework for the National Human Rights and Equality Commission (NHREC), which will address human rights issues and violations and will monitor and advise on human rights priorities in Malta,<sup>5</sup> will focus on potential and current systematic violations of human rights and will contribute to preventing such violations (based on the Paris Principles).<sup>6</sup> The NHREC will be established by the proposed Human Rights and Equality Commission Act and will be a legal successor to the present National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE).

<sup>3</sup> The White Paper presented on 10 December 2014 by the Minister for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties, Helena Dalli, launched a consultation process, which closed on 10 February 2015.

<sup>4</sup> The eventual Act should contain a general provision against discrimination as well as positive equality duties and obligations. In addition, a revised list of grounds of discrimination is to be included to ensure that all grounds of discrimination are adequately included within one Act. Intersectional discrimination is also to be tackled with specific provisions within the proposed legislation. The provisions of this Act should cover all spheres of life and will include provisions that allow for NGOs to submit cases on behalf of victims and for the possibility of class action suits and the processing of cases of discrimination without the need to identify an individual victim. Finally, provisions allowing for dissuasive sanctions in cases of proven discrimination are also proposed.

<sup>5</sup> The NHREC will remain independent but directly responsible to Parliament. The NHREC should be vested with the ability to issue opinions, make legislative and policy proposals and also criticise the Government or any of its entities on human rights and equality matters.

<sup>6</sup> The NHREC should be accessible to the public and will provide for accessible complaints procedures. The NHREC is to have proper collaboration with different stakeholders, in its quest to establish the highest human rights standards in Malta.

In the area of freedom of movement, workers are afforded protection under the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations, which came into force in 2016.<sup>7</sup> Workers and their families moving within the EU have full rights with respect to access to employment in Malta, as in other EU Member States, and are empowered to bring forward a complaint if they feel that obstacles exist to the exercise of their rights. It is pertinent to point out that nationals of non-EU states remain protected in terms of the general anti-discrimination law.

The Marriage Act and other Laws (Amendment) Act was enacted in 2017.<sup>8</sup> The purpose of this law was to make the institution of marriage available to all individuals.<sup>9</sup> The Act not only modified the Marriage Act, but also introduced changes to the Criminal Code, the Civil Code, the Code of Organisation and Civil Procedure, the Civil Unions Act and the Interpretation Act, as well as other subsidiary legislation such as the Public Registry (Inspection and Searches) Regulation. The Act introduced, inter alia, several changes to the terminology found in legislation so as to make it gender neutral. It is important to note that the amendments to the Civil Union Act provide that partners who contracted civil unions before the coming into force of the Act may convert their civil union into marriage within five years of the Act coming into force.<sup>10</sup>

In addition, Malta ratified Protocol 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights providing for a general prohibition of discrimination. The Protocol removes the current limitation in the application of Article 14 (non-discrimination) of the Convention and guarantees that no one shall be discriminated against on any ground by any public authority.

2. Main legislation

The principles of equality of treatment and non-discrimination were first introduced into the Maltese Constitution of 1964.<sup>11</sup> In 1987, the European Convention Act was enacted. Through this Act,<sup>12</sup> Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights can be invoked before and enforced by the Maltese Courts in the event that a person is hindered in the enjoyment of the fundamental rights and freedoms provided for in the Convention on grounds of discrimination.

In addition to this, Malta has introduced a number of specific legislative acts to implement Council Directives 2000/78/EC and 2000/43/EC, in particular the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002,<sup>13</sup> the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000,<sup>14</sup> the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003,<sup>15</sup> and Article 82A of the Criminal Code.<sup>16</sup> Legal Notice 461 of 2004 filled the lacunae under the 2002 Act with regard to discrimination on the grounds of religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation, racial or ethnic origin, pregnancy or maternity leave, and gender reassignment in the field of employment. The latter regulations were amended by Legal Notice 53 of 2007 and refer, in particular, to the provision of reasonable accommodation to people with <sup>7</sup> Transposing Directive 2014/54/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 April 2014.

<sup>8</sup> Malta, Marriage Act and other Laws (Amendment) Act, 1 August 2017. Came into force in September 2017.

<sup>9</sup> The Act was passed by an almost unanimous vote, with only one Member of Parliament voting against its adoption.

<sup>10</sup> In view of the introduction of same sex marriages, amendments were required in several laws to render them gender neutral.

<sup>11</sup> The Maltese Constitution of 1964, under article 32, provides for protection from discrimination on the basis of race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed, sex, sexual orientation and gender identity and also states that no law shall make any provision that is discriminatory either of itself or in its effect.

<sup>12</sup> Malta, European Convention Act, 19 August 1987 (Act XIV of 1987). This provides that the substantive Articles of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms have become and are enforceable as part of the Laws of Malta.

disabilities and the defence of rights in line with the provisions of Directive 2000/78/EC.<sup>17</sup> The definition of 'discrimination' under the Equality for Men and Women Act has been extended to include not only discrimination based on sex or family responsibility but also sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics in the fields of employment, education, vocational training, financial services and advertising.

The Equal Treatment of Persons Order<sup>18</sup> further implemented the provisions of Directive 2000/43/EC. Thus, the Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women was designated as the body responsible for the promotion of equal treatment of everyone without discrimination on the grounds of racial or ethnic origin.<sup>19</sup> Malta is also a party to various international human rights instruments that provide for protection against discrimination.<sup>20</sup>

As a general comment, little reference to local practice on the subject areas is made because there is little case law or publicly available material, and only sparse practice exists.

3. Main principles and definitions

All the grounds of discrimination mentioned in the directives are prohibited under Maltese law. The only ground which is specifically defined under Maltese law,<sup>21</sup> however, is that of disability under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000.<sup>22</sup>

Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides protection from harassment in matters of employment on all the grounds mentioned in the directives.<sup>23</sup> Maltese law does not require that the effects of the harassment be cumulative.<sup>24</sup> In terms of Article 5 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, a person shall be deemed to discriminate against another if he or she subjects the latter to harassment.<sup>25</sup>

Article 3A(6) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 provides that a person is considered to be acting discriminatorily when 'he treats or proposes to treat a person less favourably on the basis of a characteristic that appertains generally to persons who have such a disability or a presumed characteristic that is generally imputed to persons who have such a disability'.

<sup>18</sup> Malta, Equal Treatment of Persons Order, 3 April 2007 (Legal Notice 85 of 2007).

<sup>19</sup> In addition, this Order prohibits discrimination on the ground of race or ethnic origin in relation to (i) social protection, including social security and healthcare, (ii) social advantages, (iii) education, (iv) access to and supply of goods and services which are available to the public, and (v) housing. It is to be noted that, by virtue of the Equality for Men and Women Act and the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, the remit of the NCPE relates to discrimination issues based on (i) sex/gender and family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics in employment; banks and financial institutions, as well as education; and (ii) racial / ethnic origin and gender in the provision of goods and services and their supply.

<sup>22</sup> Although this Act does not make any express reference to direct and indirect discrimination, the provisions of the Act clearly prohibit both forms of discrimination. Furthermore, Legal Notice 461 of 2004 and Legal Notice 85 of 2007 provide for the prohibition of both direct and indirect discrimination.

<sup>23</sup> It defines harassment as a form of discriminatory treatment having the effect of violating the dignity of the person who is being harassed or where it has the effect of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for the person who is so subjected. Furthermore, it provides that a person shall also be deemed to have discriminated against another if the former neglects their obligation to suppress any form of harassment at their place of work or within their organisation.

<sup>25</sup> Harassment is defined as subjecting a person to any unwelcome act, request or conduct, including spoken words, gestures or the production, display or circulation by any means of written words, pictures or other material which could reasonably be regarded as offensive, humiliating, hostile, degrading or intimidating to such a person.

Furthermore, since Legal Notice 461 of 2004 and the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 provide for the prohibition of both direct and indirect discrimination, and as such definitions are taken from the Council directives, it may be argued that Maltese law prohibits discrimination on the grounds mentioned in the directives based on presumed characteristics.

The prohibition against victimisation is provided for under Article 28 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act.<sup>26</sup> This provision goes further than that required by Article 11 of the Employment Equality Directive, since it relates not only to breaches of the obligation of equal treatment but to any breach of the provisions of the Act.

Similarly, Article 7 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, as regards race and ethnic origin, and Article 5 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, as regards disability, both provide for a prohibition of victimisation and are in line with the provisions of the EU law requirements.<sup>27</sup> Furthermore, in terms of Article 4 of the Equality for Men and Women Act, it shall be unlawful for employers to discriminate, directly or indirectly, against a person in the arrangements made to determine or in determining who should be offered employment or in the terms and conditions on which the employment is offered or in the determination of who should be dismissed from employment.<sup>28</sup>

In terms of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations 2016, victimisation is defined as less favourable treatment for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of an alleged breach of the provisions of these regulations, or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body regarding alleged illegal or corrupt activities being committed by any person falling within the scope of these regulations or by persons acting in such a person's name and interests. Moreover, Regulation 7 provides that victimisation shall constitute prohibited conduct under these regulations and shall be tantamount to discrimination under the Equality for Men and Women Act.

Legal Notice 461 of 2004 prohibits instruction to discriminate in the field of employment and, under Legal Notice 85 of 2007, in respect of discrimination under directive 2000/43/EC. No such prohibition, however, exists under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 or the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003.<sup>29</sup> One nevertheless notes that the prohibition of instruction to discriminate under Legal Notice 85 of 2007, the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, is more restrictive than under the provisions of the directive.

Article 2(3) of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order provides that less favourable treatment, which is based on a characteristic related to racial or ethnic origin and takes place with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person and of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment, shall not constitute <sup>26</sup> This provides that if any person (a) files a complaint with the lawful authorities or initiates or participates in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of the Act, or (b) discloses information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulating body, regarding alleged illegal or corrupt activities being committed by his or her employer or by persons acting in the employer's name and interests, it is unlawful to victimise such a person for having acted accordingly.

<sup>27</sup> This provides that it shall not be lawful to victimise any person for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of the Act or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulating body, regarding alleged discriminatory behaviour, activities or practices.

<sup>28</sup> Furthermore, employers shall also be deemed to have discriminated against a person if such employers alter the working conditions or the terms of employment of employees to the detriment of such employees after such employees have invoked any right accorded to them under this Act or claimed the performance in their favour of any obligation or duty under this Act.

<sup>29</sup> On a more general level, the Constitution of Malta provides that no person shall be treated in a discriminatory manner by any person acting by virtue of any written law or in the performance of the functions of any public office or any public authority.

discrimination where, by reason of the particular occupational activities concerned, or of the context in which they are carried out, the treatment is legitimate and the characteristic constitutes a genuine occupational requirement which is proportionate in the circumstances. One notes that the Equal Treatment of Persons Order provides a more restrictive reference under Article 2(3) when referring to the treatment being legitimate, and not the objective, in the test for genuine occupational requirement.<sup>30</sup>

With regard to the occupational requirements laid down in the Employment Equality Directive, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002, as well as the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003, contain provisions in this respect.<sup>31</sup>

In Malta, national law does not make specific reference to the prohibition of discrimination based on association with people with particular characteristics. Discrimination based on perception or assumption of a person's characteristics is prohibited under national law while multiple discrimination is prohibited only on the ground of disability.

4. Material scope

Protection against discriminatory treatment under Maltese law is provided for under both general and specific laws. The Constitution of Malta and the European Convention Act contain a general prohibition against discrimination that could be taken to include all the fields of application listed in Article 3 of both directives.

The more specialised legislation contains specific anti-discrimination provisions in respect of certain spheres (mainly employment) or people (discrimination on the basis of sex, race and ethnic origin, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics and discrimination against disabled people). In this case, the protection afforded by these laws extends to matters between private individuals rather than matters between private individuals and public entities or authorities.

In fact, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act provides for the prohibition of discrimination in general. Similarly, the Equality for Men and Women Act prohibits discrimination in the field of employment, education, vocational training, the provision of financial services and advertising.

With respect to employment in the public sector, this is regulated by the Public Service Management Code and Legal Notice 54 of 2007 issued under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, the provisions of which were extended to public sector employees. In cases of discrimination of employees in the public sector by public authorities, these employees can invoke the provisions of the Constitution and the European Convention Act.

Furthermore, with respect to the engagement of employees by Government and Government-owned or controlled bodies and companies, under the Employment and Training Services Act, 2018 <sup>32</sup>it is illegal for a person to, inter alia, show favour to, or to discriminate against, any person for employment with any employer on the grounds of sex, religion or belief, economic means, race or ethnic origin, political opinion, disability, colour, sexual orientation or gender identity.

The Employment and Industrial Relations Act and the regulations issued thereunder prohibit discrimination in matters concerning vocational training and guidance and

<sup>30</sup> The Directive provides that the objective must be legitimate and the requirement proportionate.

<sup>31</sup> Maltese law also provides for the provision of reasonable accommodation under subsidiary legislation issued in terms of the Occupational Health and Safety Authority Act 2000, as well as under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000. In addition, the latter Act provides that employers must provide reasonable accommodation for employees with disabilities.

remuneration for work of equal value as provided for in Article 3(1)(b) and (c) of the two directives. Maltese law also prohibits discrimination on the grounds mentioned in Article 3(1)(d) of the directives. In cases of alleged discrimination in respect of the matters mentioned in paragraphs (e) to (h) of the Race Equality Directive,<sup>33</sup> the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 has transposed those provisions of the directive. The alleged victim can also seek to protect his or her rights by seeking redress under the Constitution, the European Convention Act and the Ombudsman Act.

As seen above, therefore, implementation applies to both the public and private sectors in all fields covered by the Directives.

5. Enforcing the law

Maltese legislation lays down various courses of action that may be followed should an individual believe that they were subjected to discriminatory treatment. Apart from recourse to action before the courts, there exist other bodies where an alleged victim can address his or her complaint. These include the Industrial Tribunal (under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002), the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability (under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act), the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women (under the Equality for Men and Women Act), the Public Service Commission (under the Constitution of Malta), the Ombudsman (under the Ombudsman Act), the Broadcasting Authority (under the Constitution of Malta) and the Employment Commission (under the Constitution of Malta).<sup>34</sup>

Access to the courts in cases of alleged breach of the provisions of the Constitution or of the European Convention Act is generally available to all. People who do not have adequate financial means to institute legal proceedings in Malta can apply for legal aid. Where this is not granted, costs can be seen as a deterrent. Delays in proceedings, which do occur, can also be seen as a deterrent.

As a rule, actions before such authorities are brought by victims themselves. However, both Legal Notice 461 of 2004 and Legal Notice 85 of 2007 provide that nothing shall prevent any association, organisation or other legal entity having a legitimate interest in engaging itself either on behalf of or in support of the complainant, with his or her approval, in any judicial or administrative procedure.

One entity that is legislatively empowered to assist a complainant of alleged discriminatory treatment is the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability. Furthermore, Article 33A of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act provides that any association, organisation or any legal entity which has a legitimate interest in ensuring that the provisions of the Act are complied with may institute, on behalf or in support of the person against whom an unlawful act of discrimination has been committed under the Act, with his or her approval, proceedings for redress before the competent court.

In terms of Article 11 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, the Commissioner for the Promotion of Equality may initiate investigations on any matter involving an act or omission that is allegedly unlawful under the provisions of the Order. They may also do so on receipt of a complaint in writing by people who claim to be the victims of an act or omission. Under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, where it is alleged that a worker has been unfairly dismissed by an employer, or where there is an alleged breach of any obligation under Title I of the Act or any regulations thereunder, the matter shall be referred to the Industrial Tribunal by means of a referral made by the worker alleging the breach or by a person acting in his or her name.

<sup>33</sup> Namely social protection, including social security and healthcare; social advantages; education; and access to and supply of goods and services which are available to the public, including housing.

<sup>34</sup> With respect to the Employment Commission, the Constitution limits the remit to discrimination on the basis of political opinion.

The general principle under Maltese law is that the burden of proof lies on the person making the allegation. However, Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that, in any proceedings brought by a person claiming discriminatory treatment, it shall be sufficient for the claimant to prove that he or she has suffered discriminatory treatment, and the defendant has to prove that such treatment was justified. Similarly, the Equal Treatment of Persons Order and the Equality for Men and Women Act provide for the shifting of the burden of proof.<sup>35</sup>

Sanctions for breaches are applied. These normally take the form of payment of compensation or damages. Criminal sanctions are applied in respect of criminal violations. It is pertinent to note that there have been no cases, whether before the courts or before the Ombudsman, on the amount of compensation to be awarded. Therefore, there is no publicly available evidence to show how effective, proportionate or dissuasive the available sanctions are. It is felt, however, especially with regard to the sanctions under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act and under the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, that since they do not provide for a cap on the damages which may be awarded, they are effective and sufficient.

Dialogue and/or consultation with the NGOs and/or social partners has taken place prior to the implementation of the laws and continues to take place.

6. Equality bodies

The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women (NCPE)<sup>36</sup> has been designated as the body in Malta to promote equality of treatment for everyone without discrimination on the grounds of racial or ethnic origin. The Commission seeks to ensure that Maltese society is a society free from any form of discrimination in all sectors and at all levels with respect to training and employment and the provision of services and benefits. The remit of the NCPE relates to discrimination issues based on (i) sex/gender and family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, and gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics in employment, banks and financial institutions, as well as education; (ii) racial / ethnic origin and gender in the provision of goods and services and their supply; and (iii) freedom of movement for workers in the EU—and these are the grounds which it deals with.<sup>37</sup> The remit of the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability is disability discrimination and this organisation deals with all areas of disability.<sup>38</sup>

Several entities, such as the NCPE and the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability, regularly organise publicity campaigns, participate in projects and hold seminars and public meetings to encourage people of a particular religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation or racial or ethnic origin to participate in training to assist them in entering the labour market. Jobsplus, the public employment agency, is <sup>35</sup> This rule shall also apply where the commission itself takes action to refer an allegation of discrimination to the competent court on behalf of the person discriminated against or where it intervenes in support of a person alleging discrimination and taking action for redress.

<sup>36</sup> Although the commission is generally referred to as the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (even on its website), Article 11 of Chapter 456 of the Laws of Malta (in terms of which the commission is constituted) states that, 'The Prime Minister shall upon the advice of the Minister appoint a Commission to be called the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission")'.

<sup>37</sup> The scope of the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality is intended to be widened to become a Commission for Human Rights and Equality (NHREC), acting as a national human rights institution as well as an equality body, in accordance with the provisions established by the European Directives on equal treatment. Hence, the NCPE will be able not only to build on work which has already been identified, but also to expand and strengthen its work and responsibilities in the field of human rights and equality.

<sup>38</sup> The commission is now made up of a Commissioner and a Council for the Rights of Persons with Disability.

very active in this field, as one of the corporation's main objectives is that of assisting people in finding employment.

7. Key issues

Under Maltese law one finds some instances where national provisions are more restrictive in scope than the provisions of the directives. The prohibition of instructions to discriminate under the Equal Treatment of Persons Order is more restrictive than under the provisions of the directive. Likewise, the same Order provides a more restrictive reference under Article 2(3) when referring to the treatment being legitimate and to the objective as being a test for a genuine occupational requirement.

A further feature to be noted as not being in line with the directives is that the duty to provide reasonable accommodation only arises out of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 and hence only applies to the field of employment, regarding employees with a disability and the exclusion of job applicants. In addition, in terms of the Equality for Men and Women Act, any treatment based on a provision, criterion or practice which would put people at a particular disadvantage, compared with people of the other sex or another sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity or gender expression or sex characteristic, is deemed discriminatory, unless the said provision, criterion or practice is appropriate and necessary and can be justified by objective factors unrelated to sex.<sup>39</sup>

<sup>39</sup> It is relevant to point out here that, despite the extension of the definition of discrimination, the justification test is limited to factors unrelated to sex. A similar exclusion is not found in the directives.

INTRODUCTION

The national legal system

The Maltese Constitution contains limitations on parliamentary sovereignty. An extensive and judicially enforceable bill of rights, as well as judicial review of the constitutionality of legislation, is incorporated therein. It sets limitations on governmental power and provides remedies for cases of abuse, guaranteeing protection for the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual vis-à-vis the state, and it provides for independent courts to secure that protection.

Thus, the Constitution is supreme over the executive and legislative branches, and the constitutional system provides for a system of checks and balances among and between the executive, the legislature and the judiciary. The Constitution of Malta was amended in April 2001, entrenching the system of local government. It is now stipulated that the 'territory of Malta shall be divided into such number of localities as may by law be from time to time determined, each locality to be administered by a Local Council elected by the residents of the locality and established and operating in terms of such law as may from time to time be in force'.<sup>40</sup>

The Constitution provides for the setting up of the legislature, and all bills must be presented to Parliament. Once they are approved, receive the consent of the President and are published, they become Acts of Parliament, with the full force of law. Acts of Parliament may empower the Minister responsible for the said Act to issue regulations, orders or bye-laws by virtue of legal notices. A legal notice is deemed to be subsidiary legislation, having the full force of law, without the need to obtain parliamentary approval, given that the power to issue the regulations, bye-laws and/or orders was approved in the principal Act.

It is also pertinent to note that Malta is a party to several international human rights treaties and has ratified various conventions such as the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.<sup>41</sup> Treaties and conventions do not automatically become part of domestic law. They would need to be incorporated into domestic law by legislation. Until such time, therefore, the provisions of the relative Conventions cannot be directly enforced by the Maltese Courts. It should be noted, however, that the European Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms was incorporated into domestic law in 1987,<sup>42</sup> giving Maltese citizens the right to individually petition the European Court of Human Rights once domestic remedies have been exhausted.

List of main legislation transposing and implementing the directives

Malta has introduced a number of specific legislative enactments to implement Council Directives 2000/78/EC and 2000/43/EC. The main legislative enactments include:

- Employment and Industrial Relations Act (EIRA),<sup>43</sup> adopted on 2 December 2002. The material scope is employment, while the grounds covered are marital status, pregnancy or potential pregnancy, sex, colour, disability, religious conviction, political opinion or membership of a trade union or an employers' association. The EIRA is the main national legislative enactment regulating conditions of employment and industrial relations for all employed people.

<sup>41</sup> The United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol were ratified by Malta in October 2012 and came into effect in November 2012 following a wide-ranging consultation process with all stakeholders. The UN CRPD is based on the principles outlined by the social model of disability, essentially stating that all of society needs to take responsibility for the engagement and full and unconditional inclusion of people with disabilities in the community. Within this framework the notion of Universal Design is decisive. This entails addressing attitudinal barriers as well as removing and possibly eliminating socially constructed structural barriers completely. In addition, it aims to provide the space that will allow disabled people to be part of mainstream society.

- Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act,<sup>44</sup> adopted on 10 February 2000. The Act deals with people with disability and the protection afforded to such people covering the fields of employment, education, provision of goods and services, access and accommodation.
- Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations<sup>45</sup> adopted on 5 November 2004. These regulations deal specifically with equality in employment relations and in particular afford protection on the grounds of equal treatment vis-à-vis religion or religious belief, disability, age, sex, sexual orientation, and racial or ethnic origin, pregnancy or maternity leave,<sup>46</sup> and gender reassignment.
- Equal Treatment of Persons Order<sup>47</sup> adopted on 3 April 2007. These regulations provide for the equal treatment of everyone and the prohibition of discrimination, implementing the principle of equal treatment between persons irrespective of racial or ethnic origin under Directive 2000/43/EC.
- Equality for Men and Women Act<sup>48</sup> adopted on 9 December 2003. This law deals with the prohibition of discrimination on the basis of sex, family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity, actual or potential pregnancy or childbirth and its material scope covers employment,<sup>49</sup> self-employment, education and provision of services.
- Extension of Applicability to Service with Government (Equal Treatment in Employment) Regulations<sup>50</sup> adopted on 13 March 2007 extend applicability of equal treatment in employment to Government employees.
- Equal Treatment in Self-Employment and Occupation Order<sup>51</sup> adopted on 3 April 2007 extends the said protection to self-employed people.

1 GENERAL LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Constitutional provisions on protection against discrimination and the promotion of equality

The Constitution of Malta includes the following articles dealing with non-discrimination:

Chapter IV entitled Protection of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms includes Article 45 which deals with protection from discrimination on grounds of race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed, sex, sexual orientation or gender identity.

These provisions apply to all areas covered by the directives. Their material scope is not broader than those of the directives.

These provisions are directly applicable.

These provisions cannot be enforced against private actors (in addition to being enforced against the state).

Chapter II of the Maltese Constitution<sup>52</sup> lays down a number of principles that, according to Article 21 of the Constitution of Malta, are not, however, judicially enforceable. These principles cover, inter alia: the right to, and the protection of, work; the right to free education in state schools; the equal rights of men and women; and the right to social assistance and insurance.

Chapter IV of the Constitution<sup>53</sup> provides for those fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual in respect of which an aggrieved person may apply to the court<sup>54</sup> for redress. The rights thereunder are directly applicable. Inter alia, Article 32 provides that, 'every person in Malta is entitled to the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, that is to say, the right, whatever his race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed, sex, sexual orientation or gender identity', subject to the respect of the rights and freedoms of others and in the public interest.

The principles of equality of treatment and non-discrimination under Article 45 of the Constitution of Malta relate to protection from discrimination on the basis of race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed,<sup>55</sup> sex, sexual orientation or gender identity. This list is ground-specific and exhaustive and also provides that no law shall make any provision that is discriminatory either of itself or in its effect. Article 45(3) states that: '..."discriminatory" means affording different treatment to different persons attributable wholly or mainly to their respective descriptions by race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed, sex, sexual orientation or gender identity whereby persons of one such description are subjected to disabilities or restrictions to which persons of another such description are not made subject or are accorded privileges or advantages which are not accorded to persons of another such description'.<sup>56</sup>

<sup>54</sup> An aggrieved individual may seek enforcement of these rights by means of an application before the First Hall of the Civil Court, with final appeal at national level to the Constitutional Court. Procedures are inexpensive and regulations currently in force provide that all human rights cases are to be heard as expeditiously as possible.

<sup>55</sup> One notes the use of the term 'creed' here as opposed to 'religious belief', as found in national anti-discriminatory provisions under employment law. 'Creed' is not defined under the Constitution but is commonly defined as a statement of belief, normally a religious belief.

<sup>56</sup> The Act amending the Constitution – Act X of 2014 - introduced 'sexual orientation' and 'gender identity' as grounds on the basis of which discrimination is prohibited in the public sphere. More particularly, this therefore means that acts of discrimination on these grounds are forbidden in any law or in the conduct of a public entity. Prior to this extension, protection against discrimination was limited to the 'race', 'place of origin', 'political opinions', 'colour', 'creed' or 'sex' of an individual. Moreover, the Act introduced the principle that any law imposing qualifications related to sexual orientation or gender identity shall be held to

In fact, the Maltese Courts have held that, if there is any other consideration upon which the discrimination is based besides those mentioned, such discrimination will not be deemed unconstitutional.<sup>57</sup> The Maltese Constitution does not make specific mention of the words 'ethnic origin' in Article 45. However, one may try to argue that this may be implied through the words 'race' and 'place of origin'. Likewise, the Constitution does not make specific reference to age or disability and the reference to these grounds cannot be implied from the grounds actually mentioned. However, protection under these grounds is afforded under specific national legislation.

In terms of the European Convention Act 1987, a person who alleges breach of the enjoyment of the fundamental rights and freedoms provided for in the Convention on grounds of discrimination may apply to the Maltese Courts for redress. In fact, since the grounds of non-discrimination under Article 14 of the European Convention for Human Rights are merely illustrative, proceedings in respect of alleged discrimination can be instituted on a wider range of grounds than those that could be invoked under Article 45 of the Constitution of Malta. Therefore, alleged victims of discriminatory treatment based on disability or age may invoke Article 14 of the Convention.<sup>58</sup> It is to be noted that the right to protection from discrimination under Article 45 of the Constitution of Malta is an independent right and can therefore be invoked even if there is no breach of any other article of Chapter IV of the Constitution.<sup>59</sup> be discriminatory in relation to calls for service as a public officer or service for a local government authority or body corporate established for a public purpose.

<sup>59</sup> As held by the Constitutional Court in the case of Victoria Cassar v. Malta Maritime Authority et al (2 November 2001) the protection from discriminatory treatment under the Constitution is guaranteed as being specific, autonomous and independent of other rights and freedoms. In this context, the discrimination itself is considered to be the basis for the action and therefore there is no need to make any reference to any other fundamental right or freedom.

2 THE DEFINITION OF DISCRIMINATION

2.1 Grounds of unlawful discrimination explicitly covered

The following grounds of discrimination are explicitly prohibited in the main legislation transposing the two EU anti-discrimination directives:

- Constitution of Malta – race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed, sex, sexual orientation or gender identity. It is to be noted that there is no definition of the terms ‘race’ and ‘colour’ under the Maltese Constitution.
- European Convention Act 1987 – sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.
- Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 and the legal notices issued thereunder – marital status, pregnancy or potential pregnancy, sex, colour, disability, religious conviction, political opinion, membership of a trade union or of an employers’ association, racial or ethnic origin, age and sexual orientation religion or religious belief, pregnancy or maternity leave or gender reassignment.<sup>60</sup>
- Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 – disability on the basis of physical, intellectual, sensory and/or mental impairment.
- Equality for Men and Women Act 2003 – sex, family responsibility, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin or gender identity.
- Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 – race and ethnic origin.
- Gender Identity, Gender Expression and Sex Characteristics Act 2015 – general anti-discrimination and promotion of equality rules which provides for elimination of discrimination based on gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics.

2.1.1 Definition of the grounds of unlawful discrimination within the directives

a) Racial or ethnic origin

In terms of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order of 2007, ‘discrimination’ is defined as ‘direct or indirect discrimination based on racial or ethnic origin’, but without a definition of ‘racial and ethnic origin’ being offered.<sup>61</sup>

b) Religion and belief

Article 40 of the Constitution of Malta provides that, ‘all persons in Malta shall have full freedom of conscience and enjoy the free exercise of their respective mode of religious worship’. This article is one which requires at least two-thirds of all members of the House of Representatives for the purposes of amendment.

Maltese law does not provide definitions of the terms ‘conscience’ and ‘religion’. It is assumed that the interpretation of these words should be according to their meaning in common usage.

Through the enactment of the European Convention Act,<sup>62</sup> Malta adopted the European Convention as part of its domestic law. Thus, Article 9 of the European Convention on the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion, together with the case law developed by the European Commission and the European Court, became applicable in <sup>60</sup> Gender reassignment was introduced by virtue of an amendment in 2014 to LN 461 of 2004, whereby the definition of discriminatory treatment was widened to include the following: ‘...in so far as the ground of sex is concerned, any less favourable treatment of a person who underwent or is undergoing gender reassignment, which for the purpose of these regulations shall mean where a person is considering or intends to undergo, or is undergoing or has undergone, a process, or part of a process, for the purpose of reassigning the person’s sex by changing physiological or other attributes of sex’.

<sup>61</sup> In interpreting this definition, the courts will make reference to foreign case law on the matter.

Malta. Under Maltese law there is no legislation which regulates the establishment and recognition of religious communities. Thus, there exists no legal requirement for recognition and no system of registration of the same.

c) Disability

The ground of disability is defined under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000. This Act defines disability as 'a long-term physical, intellectual, sensory or mental impairment which, in interaction with various barriers, may hinder one's full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others'.<sup>63</sup> The Act further defines impairment in the context of disability as meaning 'any loss, restriction or abnormality of psychological, physiological or anatomical structure or function'. The latter definition further amplifies the former definition and is not seen to limit the former. Therefore, Maltese definition appears broader in scope than the definition given by the CJEU in Ring and Skouboe Werge, in that it extends beyond a situation in which an individual is hindered in participation in 'professional life' to cover 'participation in society'.

d) Age

There is no definition of 'age' in Maltese law. There is no case law which identifies the scope of the protection distinguishing between younger and older people.

e) Sexual orientation

The Gender Identity, Gender Expression and Sex Characteristics Act 2015<sup>64</sup> defines 'gender expression' as each person's manifestation of their gender identity and/or that which is perceived by others. There is, however, no definition of sexual orientation, and neither does there appear to have been any interpretation given by the local courts.<sup>65</sup>

In addition, Malta ratified Protocol 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights providing for a general prohibition of discrimination. The Protocol removes the current limitation in the application of Article 14 (non-discrimination) of the Convention and guarantees that no one shall be discriminated against on any ground by any public authority.

2.1.2 Multiple discrimination

In Malta, multiple discrimination is prohibited only on the ground of disability.

In the White Paper and the Bill on the proposed Equality Act, mention is made of the introduction of provisions on intersectionality.<sup>66</sup> Currently, there are no legal restrictions which prevent a person from claiming discrimination on one or more grounds under one

---

<sup>63</sup> The definition was amended by virtue of Act II of 2012, a few months prior to Malta's ratification of the UN CRPD.

<sup>65</sup> December 2016 saw the implementation of the Affirmation of Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity and Gender Expression Act. This law is separate from the Gender Identity, Gender Expression and Sex Characteristics Act 2015. The purpose of the 2015 Act was to legislate on the recognition and registration of an individual's gender, in particular when there have been changes made thereto, as well as to recognise and protect the sex characteristics of a person. The purpose of the 2016 Act was to affirm that everyone has a sexual orientation, a gender identity and a gender expression and that no particular combination of these three characteristics constitutes a disorder, disease, illness, deficiency, disability and/or shortcoming; and to prohibit conversion practices as a deceptive and harmful act as well as interventions against a person's sexual orientation, gender identity and/or gender expression.

<sup>66</sup> The Equality Bill allows further protection from discrimination on the basis of two or more characteristics which are defined in the bill, referred to as intersectional discrimination. Thus, one would be able to make a claim for discrimination on the basis of two or more characteristics protected under the bill, thereby reinforcing the protection and sanctions found thereunder.

or more laws. However, in terms of Article 3A of the Equal Opportunity (Persons with Disability) Act, there is an explicit prohibition of multiple discrimination against people with disabilities, as the law provides that, 'a person discriminates with another person in a multiple manner if apart from the disability there exists discrimination inter alia due to gender, age, civil status, sexual orientation, race, ethnicity, beliefs, skin colour, trade union affiliation or political belief'.

In Malta, there is no case law dealing with multiple discrimination.

2.1.3 Assumed and associated discrimination

a) Discrimination by assumption

In Malta, discrimination based on perception or assumption of a person's characteristics is prohibited under national law. The Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, specifically makes reference to a person having a presumed characteristic. Thus, Article 3A(6)(b) of the Act provides that a person is considered to be acting discriminatorily when 'he treats or proposes to treat a person less favourably on the basis of a characteristic that appertains generally to persons who have such a disability or a presumed characteristic that is generally imputed to persons who have such a disability'.

No other national legislation provides for discrimination by assumption on any of the other grounds covered by the directive.

b) Discrimination by association

In Malta, national law does not make specific reference to the prohibition of discrimination based on association with persons with particular characteristics.

Indirect reference could be seen to be made under Article 6 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, which refers to disability discrimination due to being assisted or accompanied by an assistant. Similar indirect reference can be seen in Article 11 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, which provides that it shall be unlawful for an educational authority or institution to discriminate against (a) an applicant for admission as a student on the grounds of his/her disability or a disability of any of his/her family members by refusing or not accepting his/her application for such admission, or in the terms or conditions on which such educational authority or institution is prepared to admit him/her as a student; and/or (b) a student on the grounds of his/her disability or disability of any of his/her family members by denying him/her access, or limiting his/her access, to any benefit provided by such educational authority or institution or expelling him/her from the educational institution s/he is attending.

There have not been any national cases which have dealt with the prohibition of discrimination based on association with people with particular characteristics.

National law contains definitions of discrimination which reflect the definitions found in the directives and therefore the interpretation given in the Coleman v. Attridge Law and Steve Law<sup>67</sup> case would have to be mirrored if a similar case were to be brought before the national courts.

2.2 Direct discrimination (Article 2(2)(a))

a) Prohibition and definition of direct discrimination

In Malta, direct discrimination is prohibited under national law.<sup>68</sup> It is defined.

The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations issued under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provide for prohibition of direct discrimination. Regulation 3(2)(a) provides that direct discriminatory treatment shall be taken to occur where one person is treated less favourably than another is, has been or would be treated in a comparable situation on any of the grounds referred to in sub-regulation (1) of this regulation. This provision is taken from Article 3 of the directives and is therefore compatible therewith.

In terms of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order of 2007, 'discrimination' means 'direct or indirect discrimination based on racial or ethnic origin.' In terms of Article 2(2), 'direct discrimination shall be taken to occur where a person is treated less favourably than another person is, has been, or would be, treated in a comparable situation'.

The Equality for Men and Women Act 2003 does not make direct reference to direct or indirect discrimination, other than where reference is made to the use of statistical evidence in proving indirect discrimination. However, in terms of Article 2, 'discrimination' is defined as 'discrimination based on sex or because of family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics and includes the treatment of a person in a less favourable manner than another person is, has been or would be treated on these grounds'. Furthermore, the law further amplifies the definition of discrimination to include treating men and women less favourably on the basis of parenthood or family responsibility or for some other reason related to sex or sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics.

The Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 does not make any express reference to direct and indirect discrimination. In fact, there is no specific definition of discrimination or discriminatory treatment in the Act. Instead, there is a list of those instances which are deemed to constitute discrimination under the Act. Direct discrimination is clearly prohibited under Articles 3A, 5 and 6.

Article 3A (3)-(6) deals with disability discrimination in terms of less favourable treatment:

'(3) A person would be discriminating with another person due to disability if such person deprives the other person from the protection and rights provided by law.

(4) There is discrimination when a person: (a) fails to provide full access to a person with disability for all those actions provided by law; or (b) fails to furnish information with regard to the rights of the other person by means of communication which the other person can understand; or (c) fails to offer help to the other person in procedures linked to an investigation, the giving of evidence and other similar procedures; or (d) knowingly limits or by any other act inhibits the enjoyment of any right acquired by the other person both inter vivos or causa mortis: Provided that the preceding paragraphs include in particular the behaviour listed therein, but without prejudice to the generality of the conduct referred to in this Act and in the CRPD.

(5) A person would be discriminating with another person due to that person's disability if such refers to that other person or addresses him or her in a language which is disrespectful. This applies both to a person with disability in an individual or a collective manner, as well as to persons with a disability, both directly as well as by references on all means of communication, such as, but not limited to, broadcasting, publishing and correspondence.

(6) A person shall be discriminating with another person on the grounds of disability in any circumstances relevant for the purposes of any provision of this Act, if: (a) in circumstances which are similar or are not materially different, he treats or proposes to treat a person who has a disability less favourably than he treats or would treat a person who does not have such a disability; or (b) he treats or proposes to treat a person less favourably on the basis of a characteristic that appertains generally to persons who have such a disability or a presumed characteristic that is generally imputed to persons who have such a disability.'

In terms of Article 5, discrimination on the grounds of disability could also arise if the disabled person is treated less favourably than others because he/she is accompanied by or possesses any assistive means. The Act defines assistive means as 'any palliative or therapeutic device, any prosthetic apparatus, or any other apparatus or means, including trained animals, that may be required by a person with a disability specifically because of that disability'. Furthermore, in order to eliminate discrimination prohibited by the Act, a person is deemed to discriminate against another on the grounds of disability where he/she fails to publicise, in an effective manner, those goods, facilities and services provided by him/her to persons with a disability. In practice this obliges all providers of assistive means, used by persons with a disability, to publicise the said provision. However, the law does not explain specifically the manner in which the goods, services and facilities are to be made public.

Article 6 refers to that discrimination to which a person may be subjected due to the fact that he/she is accompanied by an assistant due to his/her disability:

'A person shall discriminate against another person on the grounds of disability if he treats or proposes to treat another person less favourably than he treats or would treat others who do not have such a disability because of the fact that such other person is accompanied by:

- an interpreter; or
- a reader; or
- an assistant; or
- a carer;

who provides interpretative, reading or other services to such other person because of the disability of such other person or because of any matter related to that fact, whether or not it is the practice to treat any person who is accompanied by an interpreter, a reader, an assistant or a carer, as the case may be, less favourably.'

The Gender Identity, Gender Expression and Sex Characteristics Act does not define discrimination but under Article 13(2) provides that, 'the public service<sup>69</sup> has the duty to ensure that unlawful sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics discrimination and harassment are eliminated, whilst its services must promote equality of opportunity to all, irrespective of sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics'.

The Public Service Management Code now provides that public officers shall not discriminate on the ground of sex, marital status, pregnancy, age, race, colour, nationality, physical or intellectual impairment, sexual preference<sup>70</sup> or religious, political or other convictions /allegiances.

b) Justification for direct discrimination

No situations are provided under the Equal Treatment of Persons Order as to when direct discrimination may be justified.

As noted above, in terms of the Equality for Men and Women Act, discrimination includes the giving of less favourable treatment, directly or indirectly, to men and women on the basis of their sex or because of family responsibilities or because of their sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics. A justification is mentioned under this provision, but it must be based on factors unrelated to sex, despite the fact that the relevant provisions cover various other grounds. It is not clear why the Act provides for this limitation and restricts the justification to factors unrelated to sex.<sup>71</sup>

2.2.1 Situation testing

a) Legal framework

In Malta, the law is silent on situation testing.

b) Practice

In Malta, there is no evidence that situation testing is used in practice. Although the Maltese Courts do look at legal developments in other countries to assist them in reaching their decisions, this in practice is not obligatory. It could be implied, however, that, given the absence of specific provision made in the Code of Organisation and Civil Procedure, situation testing could be permitted. It is therefore not entirely clear whether or not situational testing would be accepted as evidence in judicial, administrative or other procedures.

2.3 Indirect discrimination (Article 2(2)(b))

a) Prohibition and definition of indirect discrimination

In Malta, indirect discrimination is prohibited in national law. It is defined.

The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provide for the prohibition of indirect discrimination. Regulation 3(2)(b) provides that, 'indirect discriminatory treatment shall be taken to occur where an apparently neutral provision, criterion or practice would put persons of a particular race or ethnic origin or having a particular religion or religious belief, disability, age, or sexual orientation at a disadvantage when compared with other persons'. The prohibition against indirect discrimination is taken from Article 2(2)(b) of Council Directive 2000/78/EC and is therefore compatible with the provisions of the said directive.

In terms of Article 2 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order of 2007, 'indirect discrimination shall be taken to occur where an apparently neutral provision, criterion or practice would put a person at a particular disadvantage compared with other persons, unless that provision, criterion or practice is objectively justified by a legitimate aim and the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary'. This definition is in line with the provisions of Council Directive 2000/43/EC.

Article 5(4) of The Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, provides a prohibition against indirect discrimination in providing that, 'a person shall be discriminating with another person on the grounds of disability if he subjects such other person to a particular disadvantage through an apparently neutral provision, criterion or practice'. It can also be argued that Article 4 of the said Act provides for indirect discrimination whereby a person shall be deemed to discriminate against another person on the grounds of disability if that other person is required to comply with a requirement or condition with which the majority of people who do not have the disability comply or are able to comply, and (a) which is unreasonable in the circumstances of the case; and (b) with which that other person does not comply or is unable to comply.

The Equality for Men and Women Act does not make specific reference to indirect discrimination, other than where reference is made to the use of statistical evidence in proving indirect discrimination. However, in terms of Article 2, the definition of 'discrimination' includes the treatment of a person in a less favourable manner than another person is, has been or would be treated on the mentioned grounds. For the purposes of this Act, discrimination includes any treatment based on a provision, criterion or practice which would put persons at a particular disadvantage compared with persons of the other sex or sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics unless the said provision, criterion or practice is appropriate and necessary and can be justified by objective factors unrelated to sex. While the reference to indirect discrimination replicates that which is provided for in the directives, the same cannot be said for the justification and the provision that the same must be unrelated to sex.

b) Justification test for indirect discrimination

As noted above, in terms of the Equality for Men and Women Act, any treatment based on a provision, criterion or practice which would put persons at a particular disadvantage compared with persons of the other sex or another sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristic unless the said provision, criterion or practice is appropriate and necessary and can be justified by objective factors unrelated to sex, is deemed discriminatory. It is relevant to point out here that, despite the extension of the definition of discrimination in 2012 to grounds other than gender, the justification test is limited to factors unrelated to sex. A similar exclusion is not found in the directives.

The same test which applies to Article 2(2)(b) of Council Directive 2000/78/EC, to determine whether there has been indirect discrimination or otherwise, applies to Regulation 3(2)(b) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations.

As there have been no judicial pronouncements in Malta on indirect discrimination, one cannot detail the legitimate aims which have been or which would be accepted by the national courts.

2.3.1 Statistical evidence

a) Legal framework

In Malta, there are national rules permitting data collection.

The Data Protection Act 2018 regulates the collection and processing of personal data.<sup>72</sup> The provisions of this Act relate to the processing of personal data, as defined under EU

<sup>72</sup> The Data Protection Act, Chapter 440 of the Laws of Malta, used to distinguish between personal data and sensitive personal data. However, this Act was repealed with the entry into force of the GDPR and was replaced by the Data Protection Act, Chapter 586 of the Laws of Malta. The GDPR is directly applicable in Malta since it is a Regulation. Under the GDPR a distinction is made between personal data ('personal data' means any information relating to an identified or identifiable natural person ('data subject'); an identifiable natural person is one who can be identified, directly or indirectly, in particular by reference to an identifier such as a name, an identification number, location data, an online identifier or to one or more factors specific to the physical, physiological, genetic, mental, economic, cultural or social identity of that natural Regulation 2016/279, wholly or partly, by automated means and to such processing other than by automated means where such personal data forms part of a filing system or is intended to form part of a filing system. In terms of Article 6, subject to certain safeguards,<sup>73</sup> controllers and processors may derogate from the provisions of the Act in the case of processing for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific or historical research purposes or statistical purposes, such as when collecting data in a national census.

Furthermore, in Malta, statistical evidence is permitted by national law in order to establish indirect discrimination. Maltese law does not specifically prohibit the use of statistical evidence to establish indirect discrimination. Reference is made to the use of statistical evidence only under the definition section of the Equality for Men and Women Act,<sup>74</sup> which provides that indirect discrimination may be proven by any means of evidence including statistical evidence. No such reference is made in any other relevant legislation, and therefore there is nothing statutorily provided which can confirm that this form of evidence can be used when alleging discrimination under any other legislation.

b) Practice

In Malta, statistical evidence in order to establish indirect discrimination is not used regularly in practice. To date, there has been no case law in Malta relating to the admissibility or otherwise of statistical evidence and the conditions of its eventual admissibility and neither have there been any reported cases where the court was reluctant to use statistical data as evidence in court. Although the Maltese courts do look at legal developments in other countries to assist them in reaching their decisions, this is not obligatory in practice.

2.4 Harassment (Article 2(3))

a) Prohibition and definition of harassment

In Malta, harassment is prohibited in national law. It is defined. National law is in line with the personal and material scope of the directives applying to all sectors and persons.

The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations extended the protection from harassment in matters of employment on all the grounds mentioned in the two directives. The regulations define harassment as a form of discriminatory treatment which violates the dignity of the person who is being harassed or which has the effect of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for the person who is so subjected.

Regulation 3(3) of the said legal notice does not require that the effects of the harassment be cumulative. Furthermore, Regulation 3(4) provides that a person shall also be deemed to have discriminated against another if the former neglects his/her obligation to suppress any form of harassment at their place of work or within their organisation.

person; and special categories of data (personal data revealing racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, religious or philosophical beliefs, or trade union membership, and the processing of genetic data, biometric data for the purpose of uniquely identifying a natural person, data concerning health or data concerning a natural person's sex life or sexual orientation). Therefore, the main distinction between the two sets of data is that, while processing of personal data is permitted as long as it is done in accordance with Article 6, processing of special categories of data is prohibited unless it is done in accordance with Article 9.

<sup>73</sup> Processing shall be subject to appropriate safeguards for the rights and freedoms of the data subject, including pseudonymisation and other technical and organisational measures to ensure respect for the principle of data minimisation.

In terms of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, 'harassment' of a person means 'to subject the person to any unwelcome act, request or conduct, including spoken words, gestures or the production, display or circulation of written words, pictures or other material,' and 'to harass' a person shall be construed accordingly. In terms of Article 2(2)(c) of the Order, 'harassment shall be deemed to be discrimination when it is related to racial or ethnic origin and takes place with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person and of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment'.

In terms of Article 4 of the same Order, 'the failure by any person responsible for any establishment and/or entity to fulfil his obligation to suppress harassment shall, for the purposes of Article 4(1) constitute discrimination. Such persons must not permit the harassment of persons present in such establishment or entity, or to avail themselves of any facility, goods or service provided at such establishment or entity'.

In terms of Article 5(2) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, a person shall be deemed to discriminate against another if s/he subjects the latter to harassment.

In terms of the said Act, harassment means when a person is exposed to an act, request or conduct which is not desired, including words, gestures or conduct, or the showing or dissemination by any means of written words, images and any other material which may be reasonably considered offensive, humiliating, hostile, degrading or intimidating with regard to that person.

The concept of harassment is also mentioned in the Public Service Management Code under Section 6.6.2. This section defines what is perceived as unethical behaviour. This is taken to include sexual harassment and victimisation resulting in disciplinary proceedings being taken against the public employee. Disciplinary proceedings in the public service are in turn regulated by the Public Service Commission Disciplinary Regulations 2017,<sup>75</sup> which amended the regulations previously in force. These regulations provide that an officer shall be subject to disciplinary proceedings for misconduct such as unethical or unprofessional behaviour. As specified in the schedule to the said regulations, such misconduct includes sexual harassment and victimisation of a witness or an officer or other person lodging a report or doing his duty under these regulations or any other regulations issued in terms of Article 121 of the Constitution.<sup>76</sup>

In Malta, harassment explicitly constitutes a form of discrimination.

This is defined under the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations, as seen above, and under Article 2(2)(c) of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order. Article 5 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act also prohibits harassment, and the Act provides for a definition of harassment as a form of discrimination.

b) Scope of liability for harassment

In Malta, where harassment is perpetrated by an employee, the employer may be held liable for the acts of the employee. Therefore, employers are liable unless they can prove that they exercised due diligence to avoid the harassment, in which case the harasser is liable.

In terms of Article 29 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, the employer is to do all that is reasonably possible to avoid any kind of discrimination or harassment and may therefore be held criminally liable for a discriminatory act perpetrated by an employee. With regard to trade unions being held liable for actions of their members, this is not provided for in the law.

Provision is also made where an employer is an entity rather than an individual, in which case liability is assumed by an officer representing such an entity. Thus, Article 46 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act provides that, where an offence against the provisions of the Act or of any regulations or orders made thereunder is committed by a partnership, company, association or other body of persons, every person who, at the time of the commission of the offence, was a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of such partnership, company, association or other body of persons or was purporting to act in any such capacity shall be deemed to be guilty of that offence unless s/he proves that the offence was committed without his/her knowledge and that s/he exercised all due diligence to prevent the commission of the offence.

Similarly, Article 14 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 provides that, where an offence against the provisions of the order is committed by a partnership, company, association or other body of persons, every person who, at the time of the commission of the offence, was a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of such partnership, company, association or other body of persons or was purporting to act in any such capacity shall be deemed to be guilty of that offence unless s/he proves that the offence was committed without his/her knowledge and that s/he exercised all due diligence to prevent the commission of the offence. Whoever is found guilty of an offence shall be subject to the penalty imposed by the adjudicating authority. A person found guilty shall be liable on conviction to a fine (multa) of not more than EUR 2 329.37 or to imprisonment for not more than six months, or to both such a fine and imprisonment.

2.5 Instructions to discriminate (Article 2(4))

a) Prohibition of instructions to discriminate

In Malta, instructions to discriminate are prohibited in national law. 'Instructions' are not specifically defined.

Article 45(3) of the Constitution of Malta provides that no person shall be treated in a discriminatory manner by any person acting by virtue of any written law or in the performance of the functions of any public office or any public authority.

The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations introduce into Maltese employment legislation a prohibition against instructions to discriminate. Regulation 3(4) provides that a person shall also be deemed to have discriminated against another person if s/he instructs any person to discriminate against such other person. Protection is afforded on the following grounds: religion or religious belief, disability, age, sex, sexual orientation, racial or ethnic origin, pregnancy or maternity leave or gender reassignment.

In terms of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 the prohibition against giving an instruction to discriminate arises out of the definition of harassment. In terms of the definition section, 'harassment' means 'to subject the person to any unwelcome act, request or conduct, including spoken words, gestures or the production, display or circulation of written words, pictures or other material'. In addition, the law provides that, 'harassment shall be deemed to be discrimination when it is related to racial or ethnic origin and takes place with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person and of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment, and any instruction to harass a person in such a manner shall constitute discrimination'. In essence, therefore, the order prohibits instructions to harass but not (explicitly) instructions to discriminate. There are no provisions prohibiting instructions to discriminate on the grounds of racial/ethnic origin in the fields outside employment covered by Directive 2000/43/EC. This could be interpreted to be a provision which is not deemed to be fully compliant with the provisions of Directive 2000/78/EC, in that its scope is more restrictive than that found under the directive as, in the latter, the instruction is to discriminate and not solely instruction to harass.

Article 1044 of the Civil Code<sup>77</sup> and Article 42 of the Criminal Code<sup>78</sup> can provide the basis for judicial action to be taken against a person who allegedly gave instructions to another person to discriminate.

Whereas, with respect to instructions to discriminate given by the public authorities, one can plead Article 45(3) of the Constitution, in the case of the giving of instructions to discriminate in the private sphere, Regulation 3(4) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations appears specifically to conform with the provisions of the directives by prohibiting an instruction to discriminate against another person. As seen above, in terms of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, the prohibition of giving an instruction to discriminate arises out of the definition of harassment, and its scope is found to be more restrictive than that found under the directive.

It is pertinent to note that the definitions contained in the Civil Code, Criminal Code, Constitution and Equal Treatment of Persons Order do not exactly reflect the definitions under the directives.

b) Scope of liability for instructions to discriminate

As is detailed hereunder, in Malta the instructor and/or the discriminator is liable.

In terms of Article 46 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002, where an offence against the provisions of this Act or of any regulations or orders made thereunder is committed by a partnership, company, association or other body of persons, every person who, at the time of the commission of the offence, was a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of such partnership, company, association or other body of persons or was purporting to act in any such capacity, shall be deemed to be guilty of that offence unless s/he proves that the offence was committed without his/her knowledge and that s/he exercised all due diligence to prevent the commission of the offence.<sup>79</sup>

It is also pertinent to note that, in terms of the 2002 Act, the definition of an 'employer' includes a partnership, company, association or other body of persons, whether vested with legal personality or not.

2.6 Reasonable accommodation duties (Article 2(2)(b)(ii) and Article 5 Directive 2000/78)

a) Implementation of the duty to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities in the area of employment

<sup>77</sup> Malta, Civil Code, Laws of Malta, Chapter 16. Article 1044 provides that: 'Where damage has been unjustly caused, any person who has wilfully contributed thereto with advice, threats, or commands, shall also be liable'.

<sup>79</sup> It has been argued that the provisions of Article 28 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002, which deals with 'victimisation' and which provides that: 'It shall not be lawful to victimise any person for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of this Act, or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body, regarding alleged illegal or corrupt activities being committed by his employer or by persons acting in the employer's name and interests', mean that a person acting in the employer's name and interests cannot bring forward in his/her defence the claim that he/she was instructed to discriminate by his/her employer. The author shares such an interpretation, since this provision does not appear to prohibit a person from giving instructions to discriminate.

In Malta, the duty to provide reasonable accommodation is included in the law. It is defined.

Article 7 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 stipulates that employers must provide reasonable accommodation for employees with disabilities, but this provision excludes job applicants. Reasonable accommodation is defined as 'necessary alterations not imposing a disproportionate or unjustifiable burden, where needed in a particular case, to ensure to persons with disability the enjoyment or exercise on an equal basis with others of all human rights and fundamental freedoms'.

In accordance with Article 7(5), the phrase 'make reasonable accommodation' is defined to include, '(a) making existing facilities used by employees readily accessible to persons with disabilities; (b) restructuring jobs, instituting part-time or modified work schedules, reassigning vacant positions, acquiring or modifying equipment or devices, appropriately adjusting or modifying examinations, training materials or policies, providing qualified readers or interpreters, and making any other similar alterations<sup>80</sup> for a person with a disability; and (c) quality and vocational career guide, which guide shall be free for the person with disability'.

In terms of Article 4A of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations 2004, issued under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, 'employers shall provide reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities. In particular, employers shall take appropriate measures to enable a person with a disability to have access to, participate, or advance in employment, or to undergo training unless such measures would impose a disproportionate burden on the employer: provided that this burden is not disproportionate when it is sufficiently remedied by measures existing within the framework of the national disability policy'.

What must be kept in mind here is that the aforementioned provisions refer to employees and do not cover 'job applicants', and hence are in breach of the directive.

b) Practice and case law

While national law does not provide a definition of 'disproportionate burden', it refers to situations which would 'unduly prejudice the operation of the employer's trade or business'. In terms of Article 7(4) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, the factors to be considered in determining whether providing alterations for an employee with a disability would unduly prejudice the operation of the trade or business run by the employer shall include (a) the nature and cost of the alterations; (b) the overall financial resources of the workplace involved in the making of the alterations; (c) the number of employees at the workplace requiring alterations; (d) the effect on expenses and resources and the impact of the required alterations upon the operation of the workplace; (e) the overall financial resources of the employer; (f) the overall size of the business of the employer including the number of employees, and the number, type and location of its workplaces; (g) the type of operation or operations of the employer, including the composition, structure and functions of the workforce; and (h) the availability of financial assistance from public funds to defray the expense of any alterations. Clearly, these factors are very close to the wording found in the directive and go further in amplifying the scope of its provisions.

To date there have been no judicial pronouncements with regard to what constitutes 'reasonable' accommodation or whether such accommodation imposes a 'disproportionate burden' on those who are required to make such accommodation. However, an indication as to what constitutes 'reasonable' accommodation is laid down in Article 20 of the Equal

Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, which provides for the test of reasonableness.

Thus, for the purposes of interpreting the provisions of the Act, in determining the reasonableness of any action to be undertaken by any person in fulfilment of the provisions, including any alteration, change and/or provision of services, facilities or assistive means, regard shall be had by the board<sup>81</sup> as to whether such actions could be undertaken without unjustifiable hardship. Amendments introduced in 2016 saw the constitution of a board which shall consider all requests for reasonable accommodation which would include all requests under employment laws and generally in rendering all buildings accessible to everyone. All building applications have to be considered by the board and there is no appeal following a decision taken by the board.<sup>82</sup>

Article 20(2) contains an illustrative list of those factors which are to be considered in determining whether such actions could be undertaken without unjustifiable hardship in determining compliance with the reasonableness test:

'The factors to be considered in determining whether such actions could be undertaken without unjustifiable hardship shall include:

- the nature and cost of the actions in question;
- the overall financial resources of the person, body, authority or institution concerned and the effect on expenses and resources or the impact of such actions upon the operations of such person, body, authority or institution; and
- the availability of grants from public funds to defray the expense of the said actions.'

Article 7(4) refers to the factors to be considered in determining whether any alterations would hinder the business of the employer while Article 20 refers to the factors to be considered in the test of reasonableness; the latter contain fewer factors to be considered than under Article 7 and vary in their majority.

c) Definition of disability and non-discrimination protection

In terms of Article 2 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, 'disability' means 'a long-term physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairment<sup>83</sup> which, in interaction with various barriers, may hinder one's full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others'. The same definition applies in respect of the obligation to provide reasonable accommodation. Furthermore, the same definition applies under the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations. Both pieces of legislation co-exist, with similar obligations on employers which they must comply with in relation to employees with disabilities. By having a common definition of the term 'disability', the legislator wanted to ensure uniformity.

<sup>81</sup> There shall be a board to determine what is reasonable, appointed by the commissioner (Commissioner for the Rights of Persons with Disability) for a period of three years. The board shall be composed of: (a) five people to represent organisations, public entities and experts in the sector; (b) a technical consultant of the commissioner; and (c) a member of a committee of a voluntary organisation as defined under Article 2: The representatives of public entities and experts in the sector and the technical consultant of the commissioner may from time to time be appointed according to the nature of the case discussed by the board. At least half of the total number of members of the board shall be people with disabilities or family members of people with disabilities who cannot represent themselves. The number of people with disabilities shall be higher than the number of family members of people with disabilities who cannot represent themselves. The board shall be presided over by the Chairperson, who shall be a person with disabilities and who shall preside over every meeting of the board, aided by the Vice Chairperson, who shall be a person with disabilities.

<sup>82</sup> Throughout 2016-17, the board reviewed 49 cases, the same number as the previous year. Of these, 27 were deemed reasonable, while 20 were not accepted. There was also one case about which further information was requested. Also worth mentioning is the fact that, during this year, the Commission's technical officers conducted 89 site inspections to determine the level of accessibility.

<sup>83</sup> The Act further defines impairment in the context of disability as meaning any loss, restriction or abnormality of psychological, physiological or anatomical structure or function.

d) Failure to meet the duty of reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities

In Malta, failure to meet the duty of reasonable accommodation does count as discrimination.

An employer shall be considered to discriminate on the grounds of disability in terms of Article 7(2)(d) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, if such employer, without justification, fails to make reasonable accommodation for a disabled person, unless the employer can prove that the required alterations would unduly prejudice the operation of the trade or business run by them. Such failure results in direct discrimination. In terms of Article 34, a claim by any person having a legal interest in the matter, made personally or through his or her legal representative, that another person has committed an unlawful act of discrimination against him or her as provided for under the Act, shall be made by means of a civil action and may include a claim for damages. Any damages in respect of an unlawful act of discrimination may include compensation for injury to feelings, whether or not they include compensation under any other provision, of not more than EUR 2 500 as the court may declare.

In terms of Article 4A of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations 2004, an employer is obliged to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities. In particular, employers shall take appropriate measures to enable a person with a disability to have access to, participate or advance in employment, or to undergo training unless such measures would impose a disproportionate burden on the employer. In terms of Article 14 of the said regulations, any person contravening the provisions of these regulations shall be guilty of an offence and shall, on conviction, be liable to a fine (multa) not exceeding EUR 2 329.37 or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or to both such a fine and imprisonment.

Therefore, we note that the failure to provide reasonable accommodation constitutes direct discrimination under one law and indirect discrimination under another. It is felt that the provisions should be deemed complementary.

With respect to the burden of proof, Article 34A of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 provides that, in any judicial proceedings, saving criminal proceedings, for redress of acts of discrimination under the Act, it shall be up to the defendant to prove that there has been no breach of the provisions.

e) Duties to provide reasonable accommodation in areas other than employment for people with disabilities

In Malta, the duty to provide reasonable accommodation for people with disabilities outside the employment field arises out of the United Nations Convention of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities which Malta has ratified. No local legislation has been introduced to impose this obligation.<sup>84</sup>

While the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 prohibits discrimination on the ground of disability in the provision of goods, facilities, services, education, health and accommodation and in the employment sector, the Act only makes reference to the duty to provide reasonable accommodation to people with disabilities in the field of employment.

Implied reference to the provision of accommodation can be found in Articles 11 and 13. In terms of Article 11 of the Act, where the admission or continued participation of a person with a disability as a student in an educational institution would necessitate the procurement of services or facilities that are not required by students who do not have a disability, the educational authority or institution concerned may refuse or not accept the admission or continued participation as a student of such a person in that educational institution, if the authority or institution proves that the admission or continued participation of such a person in that institution would require services or facilities the provision of which would impose unjustifiable hardship on the educational institution or authority concerned. Therefore, the duty to accommodate could be interpreted to be limited in this instance where unjustifiable hardship is caused to the institution or authority. However, despite this limitation, educational establishments in general do provide accessibility to students with a disability.

Similarly, this is implied under Article 13 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, which prohibits the refusal to provide goods and services to eligible people with a disability, and states that such prohibition shall not apply where compliance with such provisions in relation to an eligible person with a disability would be impracticable or unsafe and could not be made practicable and safe by reasonable changes to rules, policies or practices, or by the removal of architectural, communication or transport barriers or by the provision of auxiliary aids or services.

f) Duties to provide reasonable accommodation in respect of other grounds

In Malta, there is no duty to provide reasonable accommodation in respect of other grounds in the public and/or the private sector.

3 PERSONAL AND MATERIAL SCOPE

3.1 Personal scope

3.1.1 EU and non-EU nationals (Recital 13 and Article 3(2), Directive 2000/43 and Recital 12 and Article 3(2), Directive 2000/78)

Under Maltese legislation there are no residence or citizenship/nationality requirements for protection against discrimination, with the exception of Regulation 1(5)(a) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004, which states that the regulations do not apply to any differences of treatment based on nationality and are without prejudice to laws and conditions relating to the entry by and residence of third-country nationals and stateless persons in Malta or to any treatment which arises from the legal status of the individuals concerned. This reproduces what is stated in Article 3.2 of Council Directive 2000/43/EC.

Similarly, the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007<sup>85</sup> provides that the order shall not apply to any differences of treatment based on nationality, and this without prejudice to laws and conditions relating to the entry by and residence of third-country nationals and stateless persons in Malta or to any treatment which arises from the legal status of the individuals concerned.

3.1.2 Natural and legal persons (Recital 16, Directive 2000/43)

a) Protection against discrimination

In Malta, the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers natural and/or legal persons for the purpose of protection against discrimination. There is no recent case law on the matter.

b) Liability for discrimination

In Malta, the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers natural and legal persons for the purpose of liability for discrimination.

Article 4(e) of the Interpretation Act 1975<sup>86</sup> provides that, in that Act and in every other Act, whether passed before or after the commencement of the said Act, unless the contrary intention appears, the expression 'person' shall include a body or other association of individuals, whether or not granted legal personality.

While, as we have seen in the various sections above, there are various laws which protect citizens against discrimination, such as the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations, the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, the Equal Treatment of Persons Order and the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, the said laws offer protection to both natural and legal persons. Maltese legislation does not draw a distinction between natural and legal persons for the purpose of protection against discrimination or liability for discrimination, but uses the term 'person'. There is no case law on the matter.

This term is therefore to be interpreted in accordance with the above provision of the Interpretation Act. However, with respect to the protection against discrimination afforded under the Constitution of Malta, Chapter IV thereof, entitled 'Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual', can clearly only be invoked by natural persons. This is in compliance with the relevant provision of the directive.

3.1.3 Private and public sector including public bodies (Article 3(1))

a) Protection against discrimination

In Malta, the personal scope of national law covers the private and public sectors, including public bodies, for the purpose of protection against discrimination, subject to certain exceptions.

Generally, national law is applicable to both the private and public sectors, including public bodies. However, there are pieces of national legislation which are specifically applicable to employees in the public sector, such as the Public Service Commission Disciplinary Regulations,<sup>87</sup> while there are others which are specifically applicable to employees in the private sector. In terms of Article 84 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, all of the provisions of this Act are rendered applicable to people in both the public and private sectors, except for those provisions which relate to the voluntary settlement of disputes and to the termination of employment. Similarly, the provisions of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations apply to anyone working in the public and private sectors. As far as public bodies are concerned, there are bodies, as stipulated in particular in Section 6 of this report, which are constituted by virtue of the provisions of particular laws, and hence the said laws would regulate the public body concerned.

b) Liability for discrimination

As stated above, in Malta the personal scope of anti-discrimination law covers both the private and public sectors, including public bodies, for the purpose of liability for discrimination, subject to exceptions where certain regulations apply to only one particular sector.

3.2 Material scope

3.2.1 Employment, self-employment and occupation

In Malta, national legislation applies to all sectors of private and public employment, self-employment and occupation, including contract work, self-employment, military service and holding statutory office, for the five grounds.

With respect to application to the private sector, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 applies to anyone in employment.<sup>88</sup> Consequently, the prohibition of discrimination applies to employers, who should not subject their employees or prospective employees to any discriminatory treatment. Similar protection is afforded under the Equality for Men and Women Act.

With respect to employment in the public sector, this is also regulated by the Public Service Management Code.

3.2.2 Conditions for access to employment, to self-employment or to occupation, including selection criteria, recruitment conditions and promotion, whatever the branch of activity and at all levels of the professional hierarchy (Article 3(1)(a))

<sup>88</sup> The Act, under Article 2, defines an employee as any person who has entered into or works under a contract of service, or any person who has undertaken personally to execute any work or service for, and under the immediate direction and control of, another person, including an outworker, but excluding work or service performed in a professional capacity or as a contractor for another person when such work or service is not regulated by a specific contract of service.

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in the following areas: conditions for access to employment, to self-employment or to occupation, including selection criteria, recruitment conditions and promotion, whatever the branch of activity and at all levels of the professional hierarchy, for the five grounds, in both private and public sectors, as described in the directives.

Access to employment in the private sector is regulated by the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002. Article 26 of the Act provides for the prohibition of discrimination in a general manner by providing that an employer should not subject his/her employees or prospective employees to any discriminatory treatment. The Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 does not apply to people who are not in employment or who are self-employed.

Article 26(1)(a) of the Act provides: 'It shall not be lawful for any person when advertising or offering employment or when advertising opportunities for employment or when selecting applicants for employment, to subject any applicants for employment or any class of applicants for employment to discriminatory treatment.' This Article is to be read in conjunction with the definition of discriminatory treatment under Article 2, whereby an employer cannot discriminate against employees or prospective employees on the basis of marital status, pregnancy or potential pregnancy, sex, colour, disability, religious conviction, political opinion or membership of a trade union or of an employers' association.

Furthermore, in terms of Article 26(2), the situations that are deemed to constitute discriminatory treatment under the said subparagraph (2) are merely illustrative and therefore not exhaustive. Consequently, the courts could decide that other situations that may arise may constitute discriminatory treatment. There have been no reported cases on this matter.

Regulation 1(4) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provides that the regulations shall be applicable to everyone in relation to conditions for access to employment, including the advertising of opportunities for employment, selection criteria and recruitment conditions, whatever the branch of activity and at all levels of the professional hierarchy, including promotions.

In the area of freedom of movement, workers are afforded protection under the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations.<sup>89</sup> The purpose of these regulations was the transposition of the relevant EU directive, which is applicable to all EU citizens and their families. Workers and their families moving within the EU are thereby afforded full rights with respect to access to employment<sup>90</sup> in Malta. As in other EU Member States, workers are empowered to bring forward a complaint if they feel that obstacles exist in the exercise of their rights. Third-country nationals working in Malta enjoy the same rights and are subject to the same obligations as workers of Maltese nationality. They therefore enjoy the protection against discrimination guaranteed by the above-mentioned regulations in the same way as workers of Maltese nationality.

By virtue of the provisions of Legal Notice 54 of 2007,<sup>91</sup> the provisions of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act establishing equality of treatment of people in employment have been extended to employees in the public sector.

Furthermore, Article 15(1) of the Employment and Training Services Act 2018,<sup>92</sup> which deals with the recruitment of employees to the public sector, provides that all employees required by the Government of Malta from outside its service or by any body corporate or company in which the Government of Malta has a controlling interest or over which it has effective control, whether these are employed on a contract for a specified time or for an indefinite period, shall be recruited through the employment service provided by Jobsplus which is established under this Act. Article 15(6) provides that any person who, inter alia, shows favour to, or uses discrimination against, any person for employment with any employer referred to in Article 15(1) on the grounds of sex, religion or belief, economic means, race or ethnic origin, political opinion, disability, colour, sexual orientation or gender identity, shall be guilty of an offence under the Act.

In terms of Article 4(A) of the Equal Treatment in Self-Employment and Occupation Order, no person in self-employment or occupation shall be discriminated against in relation to the establishment, equipment or extension of a business or the launching or extension of any other form of self-employed activity or occupation. For the purpose of this Order, a person in self-employment or occupation shall also be deemed to have been discriminated against if, in relation to the establishment, equipment or extension of a business or the launching or extension of any other form of self-employed activity or occupation, s/he is subject to harassment or sexual harassment, or if any person is instructed to discriminate against a self-employed or someone in an occupation.

By virtue of Act X of 2014, the grounds of sexual orientation and gender identity were introduced into Article 45 of the Constitution. Hence the principle was also introduced that any law imposing qualifications related to sexual orientation or gender identity shall be held to be discriminatory in relation to calls for services as a public officer or service for a local government authority or body corporate established for a public purpose.

3.2.3 Employment and working conditions, including pay and dismissals (Article 3(1)(c))

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in the following areas: working conditions including pay and dismissals, for all five grounds and for both private and public employment.

Malta does not have specific anti-discrimination legislation which deals with contractual conditions of employment. This is covered in employment legislation.

Article 26 (1)(b) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provides that it shall not be lawful for any person, in regard to employees already in employment, to subject any such employee or class of employees to discriminatory treatment regarding conditions of employment or dismissal.

Article 27 of the same Act provides that employees in the same class of employment are entitled to equal pay for equal work. Furthermore, it provides that any distinction between classes of employment based on discriminatory treatment other than in accordance with the provisions of the Act or any other law, shall not apply.

Regulation 1(4) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations 2004 provides that the provisions of these Regulations shall be applicable to everyone in relation to employment and conditions of employment, including remuneration and dismissals.

In terms of Article 4 of the Equality for Men and Women Act, it shall be unlawful for employers to discriminate, directly or indirectly, against a person in the arrangements made to determine or in determining who should be offered employment or in the terms and conditions on which the employment is offered or in the determination of who should be dismissed from employment. Furthermore, employers shall also be deemed to have discriminated against a person if such employers alter the working conditions or the terms of employment of employees to the detriment of such employees after such employees have invoked any right accorded to them under this Act or claimed the performance in their favour of any obligation or duty under this Act.

The conditions of employment for workers and their families who need to move for the purposes of work are protected under the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations. According to these regulations, their conditions of employment and work, in particular as regards remuneration, dismissal and health and safety at work, and for instances where workers become unemployed or are reinstated or reemployed, are protected. Workers and their families moving within the EU are empowered and given the tools to bring forward a complaint if they feel that obstacles exist in the exercise of their rights. Third-country nationals working in Malta enjoy the same rights and are subject to the same obligations as workers of Maltese nationality. They therefore enjoy the protection against discrimination guaranteed by the regulations in the same way as workers of Maltese nationality.

3.2.4 Access to all types and to all levels of vocational guidance, vocational training, advanced vocational training and retraining, including practical work experience (Article 3(1)(b))

In Malta, national legislation applies to vocational training outside the employment relationship, such as that provided by technical schools or universities, or such as adult lifelong learning courses.

As detailed below, various pieces of national legislation which prohibit discrimination also regulate access to guidance and training as defined and formulated in the directives.

Article 26(4) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provides that, for the purposes of Article 26, the term 'offering employment' includes recruitment or training of any person with a view to engagement in employment and in regard to a person already in employment. It also includes promotion or engagement in a different class of employment, thus also providing for prohibition of discrimination on the basis of marital status, pregnancy or potential pregnancy, sex, colour, disability, religious conviction, political opinion or membership of a trade union or of an employers' association, in matters concerning vocational training and guidance.

Furthermore, Regulation 1(4) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provides that the provisions of these regulations shall be applicable to everyone in relation to access to all types and to all levels of vocational guidance, vocational training, advanced vocational training and retraining, including practical work experience.

Also, in terms of Regulation 6 of Legal Notice 51 of 2007, entitled Contracts of Service for a Fixed Term Regulations 2007, the employer shall endeavour to facilitate access by employees on a fixed-term contract of service to appropriate training opportunities in order to enhance their skills, career development and occupational mobility.

With regard to access to university, other higher education or adult lifelong learning courses, Article 11 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 provides that it shall be unlawful for an educational authority or institution (defined as 'a kindergarten, school, college, university or other institution at which education or training is provided') to discriminate against '(a) an applicant for admission as a student on the grounds of his/her disability or a disability of any of his/her family members by refusing or not accepting his/her application for such admission, or in the terms or conditions on which such educational authority or institution is prepared to admit him/her as a student; and/or (b) a student on the grounds of his/her disability or disability of any of his/her family members by denying him/her access or limiting his/her access to any benefit, facility or service provided by such educational authority or institution or expelling him/her from the educational institution s/he is attending'.

In terms of Article 8 of the Equality for Men and Women Act, it shall be unlawful for any educational establishment or for any other entity providing vocational training or guidance to discriminate against any person (a) in access to any course, vocational training or guidance; or (b) in the award of educational support for students or trainees; or (c) in the selection and implementation of the curricula; or (d) in the assessment of the skills or knowledge of the students or trainees. It shall also be the duty of educational establishments and entities providing vocational training, within the limits of their competence, to ensure that curricula and textbooks do not propagate discrimination. For the purposes of the Act, 'vocational training' is defined as all forms of vocational training and retraining.

In terms of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations issued under the Equality for Men and Women Act, workers moving within the EU for the purposes of work are given full rights regarding access to training and access to education, apprenticeships and vocational training for the children of workers. Third-country nationals working in Malta enjoy the same rights and are subject to the same obligations as workers of Maltese nationality. They therefore enjoy the protection against discrimination guaranteed by the regulations in the same way as workers of Maltese nationality, including the right to training, as applies to all employees in Malta.

2018 saw the introduction of the Work-Based Learning and Apprenticeship Act 2018<sup>93</sup> which regulates work-based learning and apprenticeships within the context of vocational educational and training programmes. People who have attained school leaving age as defined by the Education Act shall be eligible to enrol for work placements, apprenticeships and internships in accordance with this Act. Sponsors must ensure that the learners' wellbeing is safeguarded and that they are trained in an environment that is free from discrimination, workplace bullying or harassment. They must also ensure that entry requirements and the selection of learners are equitable and free from discrimination on the grounds of age, belief, creed and/or religion, colour, ethnic origin and/or race, disability, family responsibilities<sup>94</sup> and/or pregnancy, family and/or civil status, gender expression and/or gender identity, genetic features, health status, political opinion, sex and/or sex characteristics and sexual orientation.

3.2.5 Membership of, and involvement in, an organisation of workers or employers, or any organisation whose members carry on a particular profession, including the benefits provided for by such organisations (Article 3(1)(d))

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in the following areas: membership of and involvement in workers' or employers' organisations, as formulated in the directives for all five grounds and for both private and public employment.

In Malta, national legislation includes membership of and involvement in workers' or employers' organisations, as formulated in the directives for all five grounds and for both private and public employment.

In terms of Article 2 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002, 'discriminatory treatment' is defined as 'any distinction, exclusion or restriction which is not justifiable in a democratic society including discrimination made on the basis of marital status, pregnancy or potential pregnancy, sex, colour, disability, religious conviction, political opinion or membership of a trade union or of an employers' association'.

Regulation 1(4) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations 2004 establishes that the provisions of this legal notice shall be applicable to everyone in relation to membership of, and involvement in, any organisation of employees and employers, or any organisation whose members carry on a particular profession, including the benefits provided for by such organisations.

In addition, Article 42 of the Constitution of Malta, which deals with protection of freedom of assembly and association, provides that no-one shall be hindered in their right peacefully to assemble freely and to associate with other people and in particular to form or belong to trade or other unions or associations for the protection of their interests.

More recently, with the enactment of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations 2016<sup>95</sup> issued under the Equality for Men and Women Act, the right of workers to freely become members of trade unions and their eligibility to join workers' representative bodies is once again afforded protection in the case of workers moving from one country to another and their families.

3.2.6 Social protection, including social security and healthcare (Article 3(1)(e) Directive 2000/43)

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in social protection, including social security and healthcare, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

In terms of Article 4 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, which implements the provisions of Directive 2000/43/EC, no person, establishment or entity, whether in the private or public sector and including public bodies, shall discriminate against any other person in relation to social protection, including social security and healthcare, based on racial and ethnic origin. However, the Maltese enabling legislation makes no specific reference to discrimination on the grounds mentioned in Directive 2000/78/EC in relation to social protection.

The Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations 2016 allow workers who are EU citizens and who move within the EU to freely access the social and tax advantages available and grant them the right to bring forward a complaint if they feel their rights have been restricted. Workers who are not EU citizens are still afforded protection under the general laws detailed above.

a) Article 3.3 exception (Directive 2000/78)

Maltese legislation does not mention the exception in Article 3(3) of Directive 2000/78/EC in relation to religion or belief, age, disability and sexual orientation. As stated above, the Maltese enabling legislation makes no specific reference to discrimination on the grounds mentioned in Directive 2000/78/EC in relation to social protection.

3.2.7 Social advantages (Article 3(1)(f) Directive 2000/43)

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in social advantages as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

In terms of Article 4 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, which prohibits discrimination on the grounds of racial and ethnic origin, no person, establishment or entity, whether in the private or public sector and including public bodies, shall discriminate against any other person in relation to: (a) social protection, including social security and healthcare; (b) social advantages; (c) education; (d) access to and supply of goods and services which are available to the public, including housing; (e) access to any other service as may be designated by law for the purposes of this regulation.

Jobsplus, the public employment agency, provides services to people who are in a disadvantaged situation and have difficulty in entering the labour market.

While these benefits may not always be legislatively provided for, except for the provisions of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order there is no specific corresponding legislation prohibiting discrimination in the granting of the said benefits.

In Malta, the lack of definition of social advantages does not raise problems because, while the law does not expressly provide for those people who merit social advantages, the schemes providing such benefits, which, in the main, provide for payments, specify who may so qualify and the applicable criteria.

3.2.8 Education (Article 3(1)(g) Directive 2000/43)

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in education, as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

In terms of Article 4 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, which implements the provisions of Directive 2000/43/EC prohibiting discrimination on the basis of racial and ethnic origin, no person, establishment or entity, whether in the private or public sector and including public bodies, shall discriminate against any other person in relation to education. Furthermore, the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act prohibits discrimination in the field of education, as does the Education Act.

Migrants are not treated differently under anti-discrimination legislation, benefiting equally with nationals from anti-discrimination law enforcement and implementation in the field of education. Migrants attend various schools in Malta of their choice and are entitled to free education in public schools.<sup>96</sup> In 2014, the Ministry of Education launched the policy document, National Strategy on Literacy for the period 2014-2019.<sup>97</sup> The document acknowledges the need to support third-country nationals living in Malta and the necessity to review the education system with regard to the participation of migrant children in schools. In this context, the policy encompasses a list of recommendations, including on the provision of information about schooling options for migrant parents, an offer of small language support classes, the implementation of assessment procedures and training courses for teachers, and the active involvement of parents in literacy courses for adult migrants. In 2017, the Government launched a Migrant Integration Strategy & Action Plan – Vision 2020.<sup>98</sup> In so doing the Government aims to create a basic but sufficient framework to improve the chances of success for all migrants who want to belong and will continue to tweak policies and services in order to remove unnecessary bureaucracy and burdens.

Therefore, in practice, several initiatives to integrate migrant children are in place in Malta. The Migrant Learners Unit within the Ministry for Education is in charge of promoting the inclusion of newly arrived learners into the education system and runs several projects which aim to provide migrant learners in school with further support in basic and functional language learning over and above the teaching provided by the class teacher. Several projects have been implemented at local level in recent years in schools in Malta to help students integrate through the provision of targeted language classes for children.<sup>99</sup>

a) Pupils with disabilities

In Malta, the general approach to education for pupils with disabilities does not give rise to any problems.

With regard to access to education, Article 11 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 provides that it shall be unlawful for an educational authority or institution (defined under Article 2 as a kindergarten, school, college, university or other institution at which education or training is provided) to discriminate against (a) an applicant for admission as a student on the grounds of his/her disability or a disability of any of his/her family members by refusing or not accepting his/her application for such admission, or in the terms or conditions on which such educational authority or institution is prepared to admit him/her as a student; and/or (b) a student on the grounds of his/her disability or disability of any of his/her family members by denying him/her access, or limiting his/her access, to any benefit provided by such educational authority or institution or expelling him/her from the educational institution s/he is attending. However, where an educational authority or institution has been wholly or primarily established for students who have a particular or specific disability, such educational authority or institution may restrict admission or continued participation to such an institution only to people who have that particular or specific disability and may refuse admission or continued participation to other people who do not have that particular or specific disability but another disability.

Furthermore, where the admission of a person with a disability as a student into an educational institution would necessitate the procurement of services or facilities that are not required by students who do not have a disability, the educational authority or institution concerned may refuse or not accept the admission as a student of such a person into that educational institution, if that authority or institution proves that the admission of such a person into that institution would require services or facilities the provision of which would impose unjustifiable hardship on the educational institution or authority concerned. However, despite this limitation,<sup>100</sup> educational establishments in general do provide access to students with a disability.

In terms of the Education Act of 1988, the Minister for Education is responsible for ensuring that the national policy on inclusive education is applied in all schools. The same Act also provides that the required resources, tools<sup>101</sup> and facilities must be available to implement the policy as effectively as possible.<sup>102</sup> The Minister must ensure that there are specialised resource centres to support schools and colleges in the implementation of the policy of inclusive education through providing a service to students with specific learning difficulties and that there are other institutions to provide education and training services to students with individual educational needs whose educational entitlement may be better achieved in such centres.

It includes various topics such as art, hairdressing, beauty, basic web design, caring for others, animal care, sport, installation of low voltage devices and cultures. In 2018, the government also introduced the 'I Belong' Programme which is available for beneficiaries of international protection as well. The initiative consists of English and Maltese language courses and basic cultural and societal orientation as part of the integration process. It is important to note that integration requests are accepted from anyone of migrant background regardless of their residence status.

Without prejudice to the above, the law also provides that it shall be the duty of the state to provide special resource centres, whose specialised role will include provision for children with individual educational needs who would benefit more from being in such centres than from being in mainstream schools, for such time as may be appropriate depending on their needs.<sup>103</sup> The Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 enshrined the right of people with disabilities to equal opportunities in all fields, including in education.

Whereas in the Education Act one notes that the obligation applies only to children of Maltese citizens, the same obligation under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act applies with respect to everyone. The Minister of Education had stated<sup>104</sup> that inclusive education provides the educational environment where disabled and non-disabled children learn together, where possible in mainstream school settings. On the other hand, special education is a provision for those students who have a disability that necessitates the provision of special and appropriate educational services.

Since the mid-1990s, Malta has been implementing the concept of inclusion. Although no specific statistics have been published on the matter, Malta has witnessed a substantial increase in disabled pupils attending mainstream schools and a decrease in the number of students in special schools, thus enabling a more specialised and individualised service for the latter, while at the same time allowing disabled pupils who do not need to attend specialised schools to integrate with pupils who do not have disabilities.

As part of Malta's National Curriculum Framework (NCF), issues of diversity and inclusion are integrated into the general principles that include entitlement, diversity and learner-centred learning. Education for diversity is also included as a cross-curricular theme (Ministry of Education and Employment, 2012). The ongoing work<sup>105</sup> reflects a consideration of a range of needs, including those of learners who are gifted and talented, those who have special educational needs or severe disabilities and those who experience social disadvantage or come from diverse social, cultural and linguistic backgrounds, including children of refugees and asylum seekers.<sup>106</sup>

disability-6736136603. Agreement was reached between both parties and the child was provided with the necessary support. In a complaint filed in 2016, the mother of a young person with severe disability contacted the commission as her daughter was not allowed to attend school unless the learning support assistant (LSA) or teachers who knew how to manage her challenging behaviour were present. The Commission wrote to the school in question and it was agreed that a meeting with all parties concerned, including the child's parents, should take place. During this meeting a reasonable solution should be found so that the child will have the necessary tools and can continue her studies.

<sup>103</sup> A minor shall be deemed to have special educational needs when that minor has special difficulties of a physical, sensory, intellectual or psychological nature.

<sup>104</sup> This was at the launch of a Working Group entrusted to review inclusive and special education in Malta, which concurred with International Day of People with Disabilities 2004.

<sup>105</sup> The Ministry for Education and Employment has also recently launched the initiative 'My journey – Achieving through different paths inclusive and comprehensive equitable quality learning programmes'. Through this initiative, secondary school students will be able to choose between academic, vocational, applied subjects or a combination of the three elements during the senior cycle of secondary education. This will involve moving from a 'one size fits all' system to a more inclusive and equitable programme which can specifically cater to each learner's individual talents.

<sup>106</sup> A Framework for the Education Strategy for Malta 2014–2024 (Ministry for Education and Employment, 2014) was launched in February 2014, aiming to address all cycles of education from early years to adult learning. This Framework aims to unify the different frameworks and strategies, such as the National Curriculum Framework, the National Literacy Strategy for All, A Strategic Plan for the Prevention of Early School Leaving and the Strategy for Lifelong Learning. Measures aim to reach across all socio-economic sectors and different cultural, ethnic, religious, gender and sexual statuses, and the Ministry is seeking to improve learners' learning experiences by encouraging creativity, critical literacy, entrepreneurship and

A new policy on inclusive education in schools was published in 2019 by the Ministry of Education and Employment: a Policy on Inclusive Education in Schools – Route to Quality Inclusion. The national policy documents, A policy on inclusive education in schools: Route to quality inclusion and A national inclusive education framework, give a comprehensive, structured and harmonised guide to educators, professionals and parents in the passage towards a more effective and efficient education system. It is believed that inclusion, inclusive education and inclusive practices are fundamental for an operative and effective education system. All citizens should be given equitable prospects and experiences through an inclusive education that is designed to meet the strengths and needs of each individual child and young person. The document A policy on inclusive education in schools: Route to quality inclusion through its four benchmarks presents key areas towards a valued inclusion that is accessible and equitable for all. This national policy is also viewed as a transformational process that is intertwined into 10 themes that are presented in the National Inclusive Education Framework. The said framework develops a holistic and applied approach towards the implementations of inclusive education practices. Both documents support stakeholders working at the Ministry for Education and Employment, colleges and schools in becoming superior advocates of inclusion and inclusive education practices.

b) Trends and patterns regarding Roma pupils

In Malta, there are no specific patterns existing in education regarding Roma pupils, such as segregation, as there are no Roma in Malta.

3.2.9 Access to and supply of goods and services that are available to the public (Article 3(1)(h) Directive 2000/43)

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in access to and supply of goods and services as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive. Maltese Law, in line with the provisions of Article 3(1)(h), refers to the supply of goods and services which are available to the public.

In terms of Article 4 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, which prohibits discrimination on the grounds of racial or ethnic origin, no person, establishment or entity, whether in the private or public sector and including public bodies, shall discriminate against any other person in relation to access to and supply of goods and services which are available to the public, including housing. Local law does not make innovation at all levels.

<sup>107</sup> This policy was drawn up by the Parliamentary Secretariat for Rights of Persons with Disability and Active Ageing in collaboration with the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability and Kumitat Azzjoni Lejn Soċjetà Gusta.

<sup>108</sup> This report was prepared by the European Agency for Special Needs and Inclusive Education on behalf of the Ministry for Education and Employment, Malta.

<sup>109</sup> The report identified recommendations which included (i) creating clarity around the concept of inclusion; (ii) re-focusing support to colleges and schools; (iii) establishing a national education training body; (iv) undertaking development work to support all colleges and schools to use evidence-based teaching and learning approaches; (v) supporting all schools in teaching for diversity; and (vi) promoting self-review at all levels of the system.

specific reference to the supply of goods and services made privately. Protection would be afforded to such supply in terms of the general prohibitions of non-discrimination.

In terms of Article 13 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, 'no qualified person with a disability shall, on the grounds of disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefits of the programmes or activities of any person or body in relation to the goods, facilities or services<sup>110</sup> or be discriminated against by any person or body providing such goods, facilities<sup>111</sup> or services which the qualified person seeks to obtain or use'.<sup>112</sup>

In 2016 new provisions were introduced in the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 which relate specifically to the provision of health services but not necessarily in the employment field. The law now provides that, 'A person would be discriminating with another person due to a disability if that person is refused the giving of a health service of the same standard, conditions, even financial, of a range and quality like that given to other persons, including but not limited to that related to sexual and reproductive health'. Furthermore, 'A person with disability shall also have a right to the health services required by persons with disability specifically due to their disability, including: (a) the early identification and intervention as appropriate; (b) an assessment which reflects the actual needs and health conditions of the person with disability; and (c) rehabilitation and habilitation services designed to minimise and prevent further disabilities: so however that the state shall offer all help as the case may be'.

a) Distinction between goods and services available publicly or privately

In Malta, national law does not distinguish between goods and services available to the public (e.g. in shops, restaurants, banks) and those only available privately (e.g. limited to members of a private association).

3.2.10 Housing (Article 3(1)(h) Directive 2000/43)

In Malta, national legislation prohibits discrimination in housing as formulated in the Racial Equality Directive.

<sup>110</sup> The provision (whether on payment or not) of goods, facilities and services to the public or any sector of the public.

<sup>111</sup> In Kummissjoni Nazzjonali Persuni B'Dizabilita' vs Malta Football Association, Final Judgement, Civil Court, First Hall, 16 November 2017, Appealed, Ref. 462/2013, the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability instituted a case against the Malta Football Association on the basis of lack of accessibility to persons with disability at the National Stadium in Ta' Qali in the principal enclosure known as the 'West Stand'. During the proceedings, the defendant developed sanitary facilities for people with disabilities and a platform from where wheelchair users can watch matches but access was not available to the cafeteria. Given the circumstances of the case, the Court did not consider that it was reasonable that the defendant is ordered to carry out the alterations suggested in order for wheelchair users to be given access to the bar situated at the enclosure. It also noted that, in an ideal situation, financial and logistical considerations would not be taken into account, but it could not discard the element of proportionality in such circumstances. Consequently, it held that in the circumstances of the case and given the costs that would be incurred by the defendant as well as the length of time needed to carry out such works, the Court considered that the exception raised by the defendant (in terms of Article 12(2) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act) was satisfied in light of the lack of reasonableness of what was requested by the claimant.

<sup>112</sup> Kummissjoni Nazzjonali Persuni B'Dizabilita' vs Kazin tal-Banda ta' Sant'Antnin, Final Judgement, Civil Court, First Hall, 11 January 2017, Appealed, Ref. 410/2016. This case started in 2003 when the Band Club was not yet open to the public. Although the building had a lift shaft, the lift was never installed and therefore different floors within the club are not accessible for all. The Commission made several attempts and sent technical officers including its architects onsite no fewer than five times to verify the accessibility issue. However, by 2016 the lift had not been installed. Thus, in 2016 the Commission opened a Court case against the club. The Court pronounced judgement in favour of the Commission and ordered the club's society to render the premises accessible for people with disabilities within three months. The club appealed against this sentence. Pending appeal, the society is still cooperating with the CRPD to implement the necessary changes.

In cases of alleged discrimination in respect of the matters mentioned in paragraphs 3(1)(e) to (h) of the Race Equality Directive, protection is found under the provisions of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, which adopted the same wording as the directive. No exceptions in the case of housing are made. Furthermore, the alleged victim can seek to protect his/her rights against the relevant public body providing housing services by invoking the right to protection from discrimination under the Constitution and under the European Convention Act 1987.

In terms of Article 13 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, 'no qualified person with a disability shall, on the grounds of disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefits of the programmes or activities of any person or body in relation to the goods, facilities or services or be discriminated against by any person or body providing such goods, facilities or services which the qualified person seeks to obtain or use'. Goods, facilities and services also include the provision of housing.

The Housing Authority provides financial assistance for adaptation works in houses occupied by people with disabilities. This assistance will enable these individuals to adapt their homes according to their needs so as to be able to lead a more independent or semi-independent lifestyle. Works may consist of general alterations, for example bathroom or WC facilities; approaches to rooms, such as ramps, steps or their modification and handrails; doors and windows; staircases and lifts; water services and electrical and heating services; and kitchens.

The Housing Authority has a further scheme in place which provides for the installation of a lift where at least one of the applicants or his/her relative who lives in the building has a disability related to mobility or mobility problems. This scheme provides for the installation of lifts in blocks/entrances of apartments built by the Government or the Housing Authority in Malta and Gozo that are occupied by tenants who have the said mobility issues and are recognised by the Government as having such needs.

Another scheme promoted by the Housing Authority is that of semi-independent living. The main aim of this concept is to provide a semi-independent environment to develop and sustain a person's ability to live as independently as possible, either in their own home or in accommodation with staff on site. This new type of housing with care allows residents to retain their privacy and independence within their own self-contained apartment, but with access to necessary support to assist them to integrate better into the community. It is open to disabled people, including people with a psychosocial disability, homeless people, young people needing care or adult or child victims of domestic violence.

In the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE) report for 2012, reference is made to the conclusions reached in I'm Not Racist, But..., a project co-funded by EU PROGRESS 2007-2013 funds. Research was carried out on immigrant and ethnic minority groups and housing and accommodation. It was reported that the conclusions from the qualitative research exercise showed numerous examples of direct and indirect housing discrimination in Malta. This is particularly true in the case of certain Maltese citizens limiting access to housing for migrants.

The main form of accommodation provided to migrants consists of access to reception centres.<sup>113</sup> Two centres are dedicated to accommodating minors and women and provide smaller categories of accommodation. Refugees are entitled to apply to the Maltese Housing Authority programme for alternative accommodation known as 'government units for rent', provided they have been residing in Malta for 12 months and have limited income and assets. Refugees are also entitled to all of the schemes that the Housing Authority offers. A recent study carried out among the migrant community in Malta (asylum seekers and beneficiaries of international protection) evidenced that housing remains an issue for this population group, as rental prices have increased greatly over the past few years—not for migrants, but generally—because the rental market is so large. Most of the people questioned for the survey cited housing costs as a burden. Moreover, problems such as shortage of space and lack of light are common, as the overall quality of the dwellings rented by the migrant population is usually poor and/or their size is not suited for the number of individuals living in them.<sup>114</sup> Cognisant of the difficulties faced by migrants in accessing housing, further impetus has been placed on improving the existing reception centres, given also that there is a lack of affordable housing even for local nationals on low incomes. Following the intervention of the European Commission, the state is further committed to introducing measures to improve public housing schemes and to eradicating discrimination that migrants may face in accessing housing.<sup>115</sup>

Research results also confirm that migrants and ethnic minorities living in Malta are not aware of their rights or of ways to seek remedies for damage suffered with regard to accessing housing and experiencing racial discrimination. This accounts for the absence of complaints brought forward, despite the conclusions reached. Progress in this regard can be seen to have been made with the introduction of the document entitled Integration = belonging: Migrant integration strategy and action plan (Vision 2020).<sup>116</sup> This strategy creates a framework for understanding successful integration assessed through the level of the migrants' own sense of belonging to Maltese society and the space Maltese society allows for such integration in its different sectors and strata. It recognises that the celebration of diversity and the promotion of equality are not sufficient in themselves as an integration strategy. One needs to ensure that migrants in Malta have a voice, are recognised for their true value and are able to build their sense of belonging within society.

a) Trends and patterns regarding housing segregation for Roma

In Malta, there are no patterns of housing segregation and discrimination against the Roma as there are no Roma.

4 EXCEPTIONS

4.1 Genuine and determining occupational requirements (Article 4)

In Malta, national legislation provides for exceptions for genuine and determining occupational requirements.

Regulation 4(1) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provides that any difference of treatment based on a characteristic related to religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation or racial or ethnic origin shall not constitute discriminatory treatment if, by reason of the nature of the particular occupational activities concerned or of the context in which they are carried out, such a characteristic constitutes a genuine and determining occupational requirement, provided that the objective is legitimate and the requirement is proportionate. This clearly reflects the relevant provisions of the directives and is therefore in conformity with the relative provisions.

Subparagraph (3) of Article 26 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act provides that:

'The provisions of subparagraph (1) and (2) shall be without prejudice to the rights and obligations prescribed by the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, and shall not apply to any preference or exclusion which is reasonably justified taking into account the nature of the vacancy to be filled or the employment offered, or where a required characteristic constitutes a genuine and determining occupational requirement or where the requirements are established by any applicable laws or regulations.'

Furthermore, Article 2(3) of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order provides that a less favourable treatment which is based on racial or ethnic origin shall not constitute discrimination where, by reason of the particular occupational activities concerned or of the context in which they are carried out, the treatment is legitimate and the characteristic constitutes a genuine occupational requirement which is proportionate in the circumstances. The burden of proving a genuine occupational requirement shall lie on the person who alleges its existence. We note here that the reference to the requirement of a 'legitimate objective' is absent. This provision is not in line with the provisions of the directives, as the requirement here is that the treatment is legitimate, rather than the objective.

4.2 Employers with an ethos based on religion or belief (Article 4(2) Directive 2000/78)

In Malta, national law provides for an exception for employers with an ethos based on religion or belief.

Regulation 4(2) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations states that when an employer has an ethos based on religion or religious belief, the nature of the employment or the context in which it is carried out constitute a sufficiently genuine and legitimate justification for the employer to require that such work be carried out by a person of a particular religion or religious belief, and any difference of treatment based on a person's religion or religious belief shall not constitute discriminatory treatment, provided that it is proportionate to apply that requirement in that particular case.

In addition, Regulation 4(3) provides that employers whose ethos is based on religion or religious belief shall have the right to require individuals working for them to act in good faith and with loyalty to the organisation's ethos, provided that the other provisions of the Regulations are complied with.

This appears to conform with Article 4(2) of Council Directive 2000/78/EC, except for the fact that national regulations are more restrictive and provide for an ethos based on religion or religious belief, while the directive provides for an ethos based on religion or other belief. Accordingly, Maltese regulations do not regulate an ethos which is based on a belief which is not religious. However, as it is a derogation regarding the prohibition of direct discrimination in the directive, the fact of narrowing the scope of the derogation does not seem contrary to the directive. Furthermore, it is noted that the national provision does not specifically refer to the qualification included in Article 4(2) of the directive, namely that this difference of treatment shall be implemented taking account of Member States' constitutional provisions and principles, as well as the general principles of EU law, and should not justify discrimination on another ground.

– Religious institutions affecting employment in state-funded entities

In Malta, religious institutions are permitted to select people (on the basis of their religion), to hire or to dismiss them from a job when that job is in a state entity or in an entity financed by the state.

In terms of Article 47 of the Education Act, it shall be the duty of the Minister to provide for the education and teaching of the Catholic religion in state schools<sup>117</sup> and to establish the curriculum for the education and teaching of that religion in those schools according to the dispositions in this regard of the Bishops in Ordinary of the Maltese Islands.

In selecting teachers of religion in schools in Malta, candidates are often requested to obtain a certificate of suitability from their local church authority. No information is publicly available on the criteria applied for the issue or otherwise of this certificate.<sup>118</sup> There do not appear to be any other grounds on the basis of which religious institutions restrict staff selection in state-funded entities. Reference should, however, also be made to the educational institutions which are run and managed by the Church in Malta, but which receive state funding. The Church has put forward reservations on the selection of people to hold high or sensitive teaching posts, but shall not discriminate between people in view of the manner in which they choose to live their private lives.<sup>119</sup>

4.3 Armed forces and other specific occupations (Article 3(4) and Recital 18 Directive 2000/78)

<sup>118</sup> A controversy arose in December 2014 when a contentious plan was announced by the Church to block promotions to higher or sensitive teaching posts to candidates who cannot prove they are 'practising Catholics'. Heads of Catholic schools were asked by the Maltese archdiocese to discuss new terms of employment that will guarantee that schools' head teachers and other staff can be safely considered to be 'practising Catholics' – or face disciplinary action if their 'life choices give scandal or run counter to the ethos of the school'. The document was to lay down requirements that will forbid top school posts from being occupied by people who do not share the Catholic faith or 'do not adhere in their substantive life choices to the teachings of the Catholic Church'. The Malta Union of Teachers strongly objected to these regulations and an agreement was reached with the Church that nobody would be discriminated against in view of the manner in which they lived their private lives.

<sup>119</sup> The Equality Bill published nonetheless effectively bans a Church educational institution from recruiting staff only practising the same faith. In comments during the consultation process it was stated that the Roman Catholic Church is against any form of discrimination and for this reason supports the EU directives protecting equality. However, it was expressed that the Equality Bill in its current form goes beyond the EU directives and encroaches upon the religious freedom of the Church, religious organisations and practising Catholics. Archbishop Scicluna also called on a group of experts in law coordinated by the Faculty of Theology at the University of Malta, who said that whilst the bill borrows a lot from the EU directive, it inexplicably omits the directive's specific and special provisions which justifies a difference in treatment by religious organisations, in limited circumstances, which constitutes a genuine and determining occupational requirement, when the objective is legitimate and the requirement is proportionate.

In Malta, national legislation provides for an exception for the armed forces in relation to age and disability discrimination (Article 3(4), Directive 2000/78/EC). Regulation 1(5)(b) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that the provisions of the said legal notice shall not apply to the armed forces of Malta in so far as discriminatory treatment on the grounds of disability and age is concerned.<sup>120</sup>

4.4 Nationality discrimination (Article 3(2))

a) Discrimination on the ground of nationality

In Malta, national law includes exceptions relating to difference of treatment based on nationality.

Regulation 1(5)(a) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that the provisions of the said legal notice shall not apply to any differences of treatment based on nationality and are without prejudice to laws and conditions relating to the entry into and residence of third-country nationals and stateless persons in Malta and to any treatment which arises from the legal status of the individuals concerned.

Similarly, Article 2(4) of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 provides that it shall not apply to any differences of treatment based on nationality, and its provisions are without prejudice to laws and conditions relating to the entry by and residence of third-country nationals and stateless persons in Malta and to any treatment which arises from the legal status of the individuals concerned.

Thus, the wording of the aforementioned provisions is the same as that provided under Article 3(2) of the directives.

In Malta, nationality (as in citizenship) is not explicitly mentioned as a protected ground in national anti-discrimination law. The draft Equality Act proposes to prohibit discrimination in various spheres of life such as employment and seeks to promote equality. The bill aims to protect individuals from discrimination based on age; belief, creed or religion; disability; gender expression and gender identity; HIV status; maternity; pregnancy; family responsibilities; family or marital status; race, colour or ethnic origin;<sup>121</sup> sex or sex characteristics; and sexual orientation.

No specific reference is made to nationality discrimination in national legislation. However, this does not mean that in practice nothing is done to counter this form of discrimination. Information dissemination carried out by the NCPE also addresses this form of discrimination.<sup>122</sup>

<sup>120</sup> In Mario Camilleri v. Kap Kmandant tal-Forzi Armati, the claimant argued that his dismissal from the Armed Forces was discriminatory in terms of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act. The first court noted that the claimant failed to prove that he suffered some form of discrimination as stipulated by law under Articles 3 to 7 of the said Act. In addition, no proof was brought that any individual had ever been granted a similar exemption from shooting which he had requested after losing sight in one eye. Even people placed on 'light duties' were obliged to perform gun training according to the regulations of the Armed Forces. The first court further noted that Directive 2000/78/EC in paragraph 18, does not require the armed forces to recruit or maintain in employment people who do not have the required capacity to carry out the range of functions that they may be called upon to perform with regard to the legitimate objective of preserving the operational capacity of those services.

<sup>122</sup> In 2016-17 the NCPE carried out research on behalf of the People and Standards Division on cultural diversity within the Public Service. The resulting research paper is entitled Cultural diversity in the Maltese public service: Approaches to diversity management. This research study seeks to understand existing human resource practices related to cultural diversity in the Maltese Public Service, as well as assessing the potential for implementing systematic diversity management. It provides a statistical overview of cultural diversity levels in the Public Service and compares them with those in the general Maltese workforce by using nationality as an indicator of cultural diversity. Through a qualitative research study conducted by the NCPE among managers in the Public Service, it analyses the management's views on cultural diversity and its impact on team dynamics, service delivery and policy development, and it discusses the Public Service's

- b) Relationship between nationality and 'racial or ethnic origin'

There is no case law on discrimination on grounds of nationality and ethnicity.

4.5 Work-related family benefits (Recital 22 Directive 2000/78)

- a) Benefits for married employees

In Malta, it is possible for employers to provide certain benefits to employees who are married as opposed to those who are not, which benefits are based on their status. The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations do not forbid an employer from providing a benefit to workers who are married as opposed to other workers who are not married.<sup>123</sup> It is to be noted that, on marriage, an employee is entitled to 'marriage leave'. The duration of this leave depends on the sector in which the employee works, but the minimum statutory entitlement is of two working days. There is no standard practice whereby employers provide employees and their partners/spouses with particular benefits. This is done on a discretionary basis in the private sector.

- b) Benefits for employees with opposite-sex partners

In Malta, it would constitute unlawful discrimination in national law if an employer only provided benefits to those employees with opposite-sex partners.

With the enactment of the Civil Unions Act 2014, the law recognises same-sex partnerships as having the same effects and consequences as a civil marriage.<sup>124</sup> By virtue of the Marriage Act and other Laws (Amendment) Act,<sup>125</sup> the institution of marriage and the rights pertaining thereto became available to all couples, regardless of the sexual orientation of the spouses.<sup>126</sup> These changes ensure that every individual is seen as equal before the law vis-à-vis the contracting of marriage.<sup>127</sup> There are no worrying trends to report regarding employers discriminating against same-sex couples.

It is also to be noted that 'discriminatory treatment', as defined in the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, 'means any distinction, exclusion or restriction which is not justifiable in a democratic society, including discrimination made on the basis of marital status'. Furthermore, Regulation 3(1) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that, 'it shall be unlawful for a person to subject another person to discriminatory treatment, whether directly or indirectly, on the grounds of sexual orientation and gender reassignment'.

4.6 Health and safety (Article 7(2) Directive 2000/78)

In Malta, there are exceptions in relation to disability and health and safety (Article 7(2), Directive 2000/78/EC).

approaches to diversity in recruitment and management. The study also provides recommendations for the systematic implementation of diversity management in the Public Service.

<sup>123</sup> People joined by means of a civil union have the same rights as a married couple.

<sup>124</sup> Malta, Act IX of 2014, Civil Unions Act 2014, adopted on 14 April 2014, introduces equality in the rights of registration of partnerships as civil unions for people of the same sex. The Act provides that it is possible to register, as a Civil Union, a partnership between two people of the same or opposite sex. The Act also provides for the recognition and registration of unions of equivalent status celebrated outside Malta. A civil union will, once registered, have the corresponding effects and consequences in law as those of a civil marriage.

<sup>125</sup> Malta, Marriage Act and other Laws (Amendment) Act, 1 August 2017, came into force on 1 September 2017.

<sup>126</sup> It is worth mentioning that a debate ensued when the law came before Parliament by virtue of the fact that it introduced other changes to other laws, in particular nomenclature changes to words such as mother, father, brother and sister. However, the law was still passed with the required majority in Parliament.

<sup>127</sup> It is important to note that the amendments to the Civil Union Act provide that partners who contracted civil unions before the coming into force of the Act may convert their civil union into marriage within five years of the coming into force of the Act. If they do not convert it, the union shall remain a civil union.

The Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, under Article 8(4), provides that, if a disabled person is employed, nothing shall preclude his/her employer from informing, if s/he deems necessary, first aid and safety personnel regarding any emergency treatment that might be required by such applicant because of his/her disability or regarding any special precautions that might need to be taken because of the said disability.

Furthermore, Legal Notice 44 of 2002, entitled the Work Place (Minimum Health and Safety Requirements) Regulations 2002, states under Article 30 that:

‘(1) The employer shall ensure that the workplace is so organised and arranged to take account of the health and safety requirements of any workers with disability, if necessary.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of sub-regulation (1), this provision applies in particular to the doors, passageways, staircases, showers, washbasins, lavatories, resting and eating facilities and workstations used or occupied directly by persons with a disability.

(3) The employer shall ensure that the work equipment assigned for use by the person with disability, or the type of work itself is such that the disabled person is not exposed to added risks to health and safety due to the disability.’

Therefore, Article 30(3) allows employers to treat disabled people differently by ensuring that the employer assigns appropriate work in line with the capacities of the disabled person, in order not to endanger their health and safety.

4.7 Exceptions related to discrimination on the ground of age (Article 6 Directive 2000/78)

4.7.1 Direct discrimination

In Malta, national law provides an exception for direct discrimination on the ground of age.

a) Justification of direct discrimination on the ground of age

In Malta, it is possible, generally, or in specified circumstances, to justify direct discrimination on the ground of age.

Regulation 5 of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 reflects the provisions of Article 6 of Directive 2000/78/EC and provides that, notwithstanding regulation 3(1) and (2),<sup>128</sup> difference of treatment on the ground of age shall not constitute discriminatory treatment if:

‘(a) such differences are objectively and reasonably justified by a legitimate aim, including a legitimate employment policy or labour market and vocational training objectives; and

(b) if the means of achieving that aim are appropriate and necessary.’

b) Permitted differences of treatment based on age

In Malta, national law permits differences of treatment based on age for any activities within the material scope of Directive 2000/78/EC. These are reflected in Regulation 5 of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations.

Regulation 5 goes on to provide that non-discriminatory differences of treatment referred to in sub-regulation (1) of this regulation may include:

- '(a) the setting of special conditions on access to employment and vocational training, including dismissal and remuneration conditions for young people, older workers and persons with caring responsibilities in order to promote their vocational integration or ensure their protection;
- (b) the fixing of minimum conditions of age, professional experience or seniority in service for access to employment or to certain advantages linked to employment;
- c) the fixing of a maximum age for recruitment which is based on the training requirements of the post in question or the need for a reasonable period of employment before retirement.'

Therefore, to that extent, Article 6 of Council Directive 2000/78/EC has been fully implemented.

- c) Fixing of ages for admission or entitlement to benefits of occupational pension schemes

In Malta, with respect to second pension funds and third pension funds, there are no regulations, as yet, which fix ages for admission to the schemes or entitlement to benefits under them.

4.7.2 Special conditions for young people, older workers and persons with caring responsibilities

In Malta, there are special conditions set by law for older workers in order to promote their vocational integration. The Business Promotion Regulations 2000<sup>129</sup> provide fiscal incentives to employers which create jobs and employ and train people aged over 40. If such people are registered as disabled, these incentives are further increased. There is no obligation for employers to take action to benefit from such incentives or otherwise.

There is a section of the female population who require support because they have caring responsibilities which prevent them from actively participating in the labour market. No special conditions or legislative incentives as yet exist for these people. However, it is recognised that the care infrastructure availability, accessibility and quality of care for children and other dependents need to be strengthened.<sup>130</sup> On the national level, the Government launched a public consultation on its proposal of granting sick leave for parents taking care of sick children in the form of questions on whether there is the need for such a measure, its potential benefits and downsides and the best way of implementing it.

4.7.3 Minimum and maximum age requirements

In Malta, there are no exceptions permitting minimum and/or maximum age requirements in relation to access to employment and training.<sup>131</sup>

Under Maltese law, any person who has passed the compulsory school age<sup>132</sup> may seek employment and/or be employed.

However, Article 48(3) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provides that the Minister responsible for Employment and Industrial Relations may make regulations which prescribe the manner and the circumstances in which people who are above compulsory school age, as defined in the Education Act 1988,<sup>133</sup> but who have not yet attained the age of 18 years, may be employed. This includes the power to designate certain categories or classes of employment as prohibited employment for such people.

Furthermore, Article 128(1) of the Education Act 1988 provides that no person may employ a minor of compulsory school age or who is otherwise bound to regularly attend school under the provisions of the Act without the written permission of the Minister of Education. No public discussion has taken place as to whether this is regarded as being in compliance with the directive.

There is no evidence of age discrimination when it comes to accessing training opportunities. Jobsplus, which is the public employment agency, provides various training schemes.<sup>134</sup> It also provides training courses specifically directed at registered unemployed people over 40 years of age.

4.7.4 Retirement

a) State pension age

In Malta, there is a state pension age, at which individuals must begin to collect their state pensions. If an individual wishes to work longer and agreement is reached with the employer, the pension cannot be deferred. The individual can collect a pension and still work.

The Social Security Act 1987<sup>135</sup> provides under Article 2 that the 'pension age' applicable to both men and women in Malta is 65; but:

- in the case of a person born on or before 31 December 1951, the pension age shall be 61 years;
- in the case of a person born during the calendar years 1952 to 1955, the pension age shall be 62 years;
- in the case of a person born during the calendar years 1956 to 1958, the pension age shall be 63 years; and
- in the case of a person born during the calendar years 1959 to 1961, the pension age shall be 64 years. Notwithstanding the above, in the case of a woman born on or before 31 December 1951, the pension age shall be 60 years.

b) Occupational pension schemes

In Malta, there is no fixed age when people can begin to receive payments from occupational pension schemes and other employer-funded pension arrangements. If an individual wishes to work longer, payments from such occupational pension schemes can presumably be deferred. An individual can collect a pension and still work.

c) State imposed mandatory retirement ages

In Malta, there is a state-imposed mandatory retirement age, but people may choose to retire and stop working at any age. Where people are employed, as opposed to being self-employed, agreement must be reached with the employer should the employee wish

<sup>134</sup> By means of the Work Trial Scheme, Jobsplus encourages the employment of young people between the ages of 16 and 24 so that they may gain work experience and on-the-job training, as well as people who have recently been declared redundant and other people trying to enter the job market.

<sup>135</sup> Malta, Social Security Act, 1 January 1987 (Act X of 1987), Laws of Malta, Chapter 318, as subsequently amended from time to time, with a new definition of pensionable age introduced in 2006.

to stop working before reaching retirement age or to continue working after reaching retirement age.

National legislation provides for a pension age at which people are entitled to receive a state pension. The pension age is 65, subject to the exceptions mentioned above (with respect to people born between 1951 and 1961). Nonetheless, agreement may be reached between the employer and employee for employment to continue and for an employee to continue working beyond pension age.

d) Retirement ages imposed by employers

In Malta, national law does not permit employers to set retirement ages which fall earlier than the pension age (or ages at which the termination of an employment contract is possible) unilaterally.<sup>136</sup> Employers can introduce retirement schemes, but employees must consent to them and cannot be forced to participate in the scheme.

The last proviso to Article 36(14) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provides that, 'the employer can terminate the employment of an employee when the employee reaches pension age as defined in the Social Security Act', and this will constitute a good and sufficient cause for termination. It is to be noted that it is standard practice that employees leave employment on reaching pension age.

e) Employment rights applicable to all workers irrespective of age

The laws on protection against dismissal do not apply to people who remain in employment on attaining pensionable age, while other laws protecting employment rights do apply to all workers irrespective of age, if they remain in employment on reaching pensionable age.

If, at 65, a person continues working, he/she would not be afforded protection against dismissal on the grounds of age; however, as the person is still in employment, he/she would retain some employment rights under other laws protecting employment rights during employment.<sup>137</sup>

<sup>136</sup> On 26 September 2013, the Government was ordered to pay over EUR 700 000 in compensation to four stevedore foremen after a court ruled that their fundamental human rights to enjoyment of their property was violated by a law which made them retire on turning 61. Mr Justice Anthony Ellul, in the First Hall of the Civil Court (Rikors Numru. 60/2007), delivered this judgment following a constitutional application filed by Anthony Attard, Armando Chircop, Anthony Spiteri and another Anthony Attard against the Union Haddiema Maghqudin, the Malta Maritime Authority, the Prime Minister, the Minister for Competitiveness and Competition and the Attorney General. The men had filed their application in 2007, claiming that a legal notice had been promulgated in that year which had established that they, like other port workers, had to retire upon reaching the age of 61. In a preliminary judgment delivered in November 2011, the court had ruled that this legal notice was in violation of the men's right to enjoyment of their property, as they were being deprived of their licence to work as foremen in the harbour when they reached the age of 61. The court ruled that the men's licence was their property and that failure to renew their licences was a violation of their property rights. The judgment was confirmed by the Constitutional Court and the 2013 judgment was limited to the quantum of compensation owing to the men. In liquidating the damages suffered by the men, the court took into consideration their earnings prior to the age of 61 and projected these earnings until they reached the age of 71. In an appeal decided on 10 March 2014 by the Constitutional Court, the amount of damages payable by Government was reduced (Appell Civili Numru. 60/2007/3).

<sup>137</sup> In Grech Reginald et v. Onor. Ministru Għat-Trasport u l-Infrastruttura et, the claimants had received a notice from the Malta Maritime Authority whereby they were given the possibility of early retirement at the age of 55 which they felt they were constrained to accept. The foremen alleged that their rights safeguarded under Articles 37 and 45 of the Constitution and Article 14 and the first Protocol of the European Convention on Human Rights were being infringed. The first court referred to Directives 2000/78/EC and 2000/43/EC and stated that discrimination can occur on the basis of age. However, the court held that in such cases, a comparison must be made between all the foremen working at the port (and not between other self-employed workers) and thus concluded that discrimination had taken place. The first court also held that the licence issued to the foremen should be considered as a 'possession' in terms of the Convention. Consequently, it compelled the Minister for Transport and Infrastructure to pay each of the claimants, EUR 186 350, as compensation for loss of their licence and their earnings, and a further EUR 2 000 each as compensation for non-pecuniary damages. However the judgment was reversed by the Constitutional Court.

f) Compliance of national law with CJEU case law

In Malta, national legislation is in line with the CJEU case law on age regarding compulsory retirement.

As stated above, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act provides that employment can be terminated by the employer when the employee reaches pension age. Therefore, the law provides for a compulsory pension age, but also provides for agreement to be reached between the employee and employer whereby the employee can work beyond pension age.

4.7.5 Redundancy

a) Age and seniority taken into account for redundancy selection

In Malta, national law permits seniority to be taken into account in selecting workers for redundancy.

With respect to redundancy in the private sector, this is regulated under Article 36(3) and (4) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002. In the event that a person is declared redundant by his/her employer and the following provisions of law are not observed, legal action for unfair dismissal can be instituted by the employee against the employer.

Subparagraph (3) provides that a contract of service for an indefinite time may be terminated by the employer if there exists a good and sufficient cause for this<sup>138</sup> or on grounds of redundancy.

Furthermore, in terms of Article 36(4), if an employer intends to terminate the employment of an employee on grounds of redundancy, they shall terminate the employment of that person who was engaged last in the class of employment affected by such a redundancy, unless the individual is related to the employer (not being a limited liability company or a statutory body) by blood or marriage.

In such an instance, the employer may, instead of terminating the employment of this individual, terminate that of the person next in turn. The reason for this exception has always been so as to try and prevent problems within families or through marriage.

Thus, it is clear that a person may be declared redundant not on the basis of their age, sexual orientation, disability, religious beliefs or racial or ethnic origin but on the objective criterion as to who was last employed in the post, subject to the proviso of relationship by blood or marriage.

b) Age taken into account for redundancy compensation

In Malta, national law provides for compensation to be granted for redundancy. Redundancy payments do not depend on age but on the duration of the employment of the employee who is employed on an indefinite basis – for example, an employee who

Discrimination could hence take place when distinctions are made on the basis of age. Since the foremen were all below the age of 61, the Constitutional Court noted that the claimants could all be issued with a licence. It was the claimants who had chosen to give up their licence upon accepting the retirement scheme. Therefore, it held that the circumstances of the claimants' case did not constitute a violation of Article 45 of the Constitution and Article 14 of the Convention upon comparison with the other foremen because in actual fact they had all been treated in the same manner.

<sup>138</sup> This deals with termination of employment on grounds of a good and sufficient cause. The law does not define a good and sufficient cause but lists those instances which are not deemed to constitute a good and sufficient cause. Each case is to be determined on its own merits to see whether the termination of the employment was based on a good and sufficient cause.

has worked for three years would be entitled to four weeks' notice of termination of employment, whereas if they had worked for 10 years, they would be entitled to 11 weeks' notice. The maximum notice period is 12 weeks. These notice periods are fixed by law and cannot be shortened.

On receiving notice of termination on the ground of redundancy from the employer, the employee may either continue to perform work until the period of notice expires or, at any time during the period of notice, may require the employer to pay them a sum equal to the wages that would be payable in respect of the unexpired period of notice and therefore, in the latter case, not work during the notice period. Usually, employees in this situation opt for the latter arrangement since, during such notice period, they may start seeking new employment. Also, if the employer fails to give notice, they shall be liable to pay to the employee a sum equal to the wages that would be payable in respect of the period of notice.

Furthermore, the employer may pay the employee additional amounts, but these would be paid at the employer's sole discretion.

4.8 Public security, public order, criminal offences, protection of health, protection of the rights and freedoms of others (Article 2(5), Directive 2000/78)

In Malta, national law includes exceptions that seek to rely on Article 2(5) of the Employment Equality Directive.

Regulation 1(6)(a) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 reflects the provisions of Article 2(5) of Directive 2000/78/EC and provides that the provisions of this legal notice shall be without prejudice to, inter alia, any law necessary for public security, for maintaining public order, for the prevention of criminal offences, for the protection of health and for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others.

4.9 Any other exceptions

In Malta, other exceptions to the prohibition of discrimination (on any ground) provided in national law are as follows.

Regulation 1(6) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that the provisions of the Regulations shall be read and construed without prejudice to the introduction and implementation of provisions in collective agreements or any other agreements entered into between employers and employees that lay down anti-discrimination rules in the areas referred to in sub-regulation (3) of Regulation 1 which respect the minimum requirements in these regulations.

5 POSITIVE ACTION (Article 5 Directive 2000/43, Article 7 Directive 2000/78)

a) Scope for positive action measures

In Malta, positive action in respect of racial or ethnic origin, religion or belief, disability, age or sexual orientation is permitted in national law.

Regulation 6(1) of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 states that nothing shall render unlawful any act carried out in or in connection with:

- affording persons of a particular religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation or racial or ethnic origin access to benefits relating to training which would help prepare them for a particular job; or
- encouraging such persons referred to in sub-regulation (1)(a) of this regulation to take advantage of opportunities for doing a particular job; or
- instances where it reasonably appears to the person carrying out the act that it prevents or compensates for disadvantages linked to the grounds of religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation and racial or ethnic origin. There are no prescribed criteria to determine what constitutes 'disadvantages'.

The law does not provide for those grounds for which positive action is not permitted by law.

Several entities, such as the NCPE<sup>139</sup> and the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability, regularly organise publicity campaigns, participate in projects and hold seminars and public meetings to encourage people of a particular religion or religious belief, disability, age, sexual orientation or racial or ethnic origin to participate in training to assist them in entering the labour market. Jobsplus is very active in this field, as one of the corporation's main objectives is that of assisting people in finding employment. Jobsplus offers specific services to people who are in disadvantaged situations and who therefore find it more difficult to enter the labour market. These services are offered through the Inclusive Employment Services. People in disadvantaged situations include people with disabilities, former substance abusers, former prison inmates, workers who have been out of the labour market for more than five years, and other people with different social problems. The employment advisors give assistance and job search guidance to these people. It is up to the individual to seek this particular service.<sup>140</sup>

b) Quotas in employment for people with disabilities

Positive measures of a general social nature, applicable to both the private and public sectors, quotas and preferential treatment do exist with regard to people with a disability in the employment field.

<sup>139</sup> As mentioned in the NCPE annual report for 2016, one document reviewed by the NCPE was the proposal by Jobsplus to create Job Brokerage Offices for migrants who went through the asylum process with the aim of regularising short-term employment with working conditions that are in accordance with the law. The NCPE stated that the needs and realities of people who went through the asylum process should be acknowledged and addressed. However, this should happen through an extension and strengthening of the current services offered by the Government and not through the creation of parallel systems. The NCPE insisted that the principles of fairness, transparency and accountability in recruitment should be ensured. In the financial budget for 2017, the Government declared its commitment to set up this scheme and in January 2017 it was announced that a public tender would be issued, with the offices to be set up by March 2017. It appears, however, that this scheme has not yet been launched.

<sup>140</sup> Training and vocational training services are also offered by Richmond Foundation, Agenzija Support and Inspire. The schemes include the Bridging the Gap Scheme, the Community Inclusive Employment Scheme, the Community Work Scheme, the Sheltered Employment Training and the Job Bridge Programme.

The Persons with Disability (Employment) Act 1969<sup>141</sup> provides for the compulsory engagement, on a quota basis, of disabled people<sup>142</sup> registering for employment.<sup>143</sup>

Section 15 of this Act states, inter alia, that:

'(1) Any person to whom this section applies shall give employment to such number of registered persons as is his quota in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of this Act:

Provided that any person to whom, on the coming into operation of this Act, this section applies, shall (if needs be) comply with the provisions of this subsection as and when vacancies occur.

(2) A person to whom this section applies shall not at any time take, or offer to take, into his employment any person other than a registered person, if, immediately after the taking in of that person, the number of registered persons in his employment (excluding persons employed by him in an employment of a class at that time designated under section 19 of this Act) would be less than his quota.'

The quota shall be a number ascertained in accordance with the following provisions of Section 16 of the said Act:

'(2) The Minister, after consultation with the Corporation, shall by order specify a standard percentage<sup>144</sup> and may, in like manner, specify a special percentage, either greater or smaller than the standard percentage.

(3) A special percentage specified by the Minister under subsection (2) of this section shall be made with respect to employment in any trade or industry, or in any branch or part of any trade or industry, or to employment with any class of employer, being employment to which, in the opinion of the Minister, a percentage, other than the standard percentage, should be assigned owing to its distinctive characteristics as respects its suitability for persons with disability.

(4) An order specifying a special percentage shall contain such provisions as may appear to the Minister to be requisite for more particularly defining for the purposes of this section the trade or industry, branch or part of a trade or industry, or class of employer, to employment in which or with whom such percentage is assigned.

(5) The quota at any time of a person to whom section 15 of this Act applies shall be the number ascertained by applying to the number of all the persons at that time in his employment (excluding persons employed by him in an employment of a class at that time designated under section 19 of this Act and any employee related to him by consanguinity or affinity up to the third degree)

- so far as they consist of persons employed by him in an employment other than one to which a special percentage is at that time assigned, the standard percentage; and
  - so far as they consist of persons employed by him in an employment to which a special percentage is at that time assigned, that percentage:
- Provided that, if the number so ascertained includes or consists of a fraction less than one half, such fraction shall be disregarded, and, if the number so ascertained includes or consists of a fraction being one-half or more, the quota shall be the nearest higher whole number.'

<sup>142</sup> In terms of this Act, a 'person with disability' means a person, being over compulsory school age, who, by reason of injury, disease, congenital deformity or other physical or mental incapacity, is substantially impaired in obtaining or keeping employment or in undertaking work on his/her own account, of a kind which apart from that injury, disease, deformity or incapacity would be suited to his/her age, experience and qualifications; and the word 'disability', in relation to any person, shall be construed accordingly. It is to be noted that this definition differs from the definition found under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act.

In 2015, Section 16 was extended to add enforcement provisions. Thus, an employer who fails to respect the quota referred to shall be asked by the corporation to make an annual contribution of EUR 2 400 for every person with disability who should be in his/her employment, up to a maximum of EUR 10 000 for any employer who fails to respect the quota. The contribution payable was staggered until 2017. However, as from 2017, the full amount of the contribution is payable.<sup>145</sup>

On 28 April 2016, a memorandum of understanding was signed between the Malta Employers Association, the Chamber of Commerce, Enterprise and Industry and Jobsplus on the employment of people with disabilities in the private sector. The memorandum has resolved the difficulties that employers had been facing in implementing the law. One issue tackled in the memorandum is that, in the case of a group of companies, the different companies within the group would be able to share – not necessarily equally – the number of disabled people who have to be employed according to the law. The memo also enabled Jobsplus to inform employers if one of their employees was disabled, should the person concerned give consent.

In a report entitled Position paper on Governments' measures to increase employment of disabled persons,<sup>146</sup> it was stated that there were 1 300 registered disabled people who were employed. In January 2018, it was stated that there were 288 disabled people registered with Jobsplus as seeking work.<sup>147</sup> It is pertinent to point out that not all disabled people register with Jobsplus and hence the figures cannot be deemed to be an accurate reflection of reality.<sup>148</sup> It was recently announced that in October 2018 there were 3 508 people with disabilities gainfully employed.<sup>149</sup> This is a stark increase from previously published statistics. Nonetheless, further initiatives need to be taken in order to encourage employers to offer employment to disabled people so that the number of employed people will continue to increase and lead to equal opportunities for people with disabilities seeking employment.<sup>150</sup>

Special arrangements exist to assist people with disabilities to access employment in the public sector. Registered people with disabilities who do not satisfy all the eligibility requirements in calls for applications but who are capable of carrying out, in essence, the duties attached to a particular post/position, are allowed to ask for special consideration when applying for posts/positions in the public service.<sup>151</sup>

The Business Promotion Regulations 2000 provide fiscal incentives to employers who create jobs and employ and train people over 40 years of age. If such people are registered as disabled, these incentives are further increased. There is no obligation for employers to take action to benefit from such incentives or otherwise.

<sup>145</sup> The contributions/fines paid by those employers who fail to satisfy the 2 % quota will be administered by Jobsplus and will be contributed to the Lino Spiteri Foundation. This Foundation, established on 25 May 2015, has been set up in order to improve the integration of vulnerable individuals into gainful employment through the empowerment of the individuals themselves, as well as the employers who recruit them. The Foundation wishes to reach and exceed a suitable and sustainable level of employment for people with disabilities, mental health problems and vulnerable people, all of whom can contribute to the country's economy as well as civil society in general.

<sup>148</sup> In December 2013, the Government announced that it was drawing up a comprehensive register of disabled persons to better analyse and provide for their needs.

<sup>149</sup> The findings of a research report for the project 'Research on the Situation of Disabled Persons in Malta', concluded by the CRPD in 2014, showed that, of the 600 persons interviewed, 2 % were in part-time employment and 7.8 % in full-time employment.

<sup>150</sup> One such initiative was the Me2 Project, as a result of which 52 disabled people found employment, and the Government scheme launched in September 2012 whereby disabled people were to be employed by local councils. The aim was to have 80 people working for three years under this scheme.

Further positive action taken in 2015 was through the enactment of Act No. VII of 2015. This Act seeks to integrate more people with disabilities into the various entities present in the Maltese legal and governmental system by way of a provision in which at least one person with a disability must be part of the major public entities/authorities (as specified below) governed by Maltese Law. The Various Laws (Persons with Disability) (Membership in Various Entities) Act<sup>152</sup> provides for the increase by one member within each board or entity to include a person with a disability. There is no publicly available information on the enforcement or otherwise of this regulation.

The Act affects the composition of the following entities, increasing their number by one and imposing that at least one member be a person with a disability or a person representing such people as the case may be:

1. The Housing Authority (set up under the Housing Authority Act (Chapter 261, Laws of Malta));
2. The National Commission for Further and Higher Education (set up under the Education Act (Chapter 327, Laws of Malta));
3. Jobsplus (set up under the Employment and Training Services Act (Chapter 594, Laws of Malta));
4. The Broadcasting Authority (set up under the Broadcasting Act (Chapter 350, Laws of Malta));
5. The Refugee Appeals Board (set up under the Refugees Act (Chapter 420, Laws of Malta));
6. The Malta Statistics Authority (set up under the Malta Statistics Authority Act (Chapter 422, Laws of Malta));
7. The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women (set up under the Equality for Men and Women Act (Chapter 456, Laws of Malta));
8. The Commission on Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence (set up under the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act (Chapter 581, Laws of Malta));<sup>153</sup>
9. The Council for the Voluntary Sector (set up under the Voluntary Organisations Act (Chapter 492, Laws of Malta));
10. The Authority for Transport in Malta (set up under the Authority for Transport in Malta Act (Chapter 499, Laws of Malta)).

The above entities are all public entities and therefore the Prime Minister of Malta, or the relevant Minister whose Ministry governs the specific entity, as applicable, is responsible for the implementation of these provisions. The entities must be constituted according to these provisions, including the above new requirements. Otherwise, such public entities will not be considered as legally constituted in accordance with Maltese law.

<sup>152</sup> Malta, Various Laws (Persons with Disability) (Membership in Various Entities) Act, 10 March 2015.

<sup>153</sup> 2018 saw the introduction of the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act. The purpose of the Act is to make provision for the substantive articles of the Council of Europe Convention on prevention and combating of violence against women and domestic violence to become, and be, enforceable as part of the Laws of Malta; to promote and protect the right of everyone, and particularly of persons who are at risk of domestic violence to live free from violence in both the public and private sphere. The implementation of the provisions of this Act, in particular measures to protect the rights of victims, shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as age; association with a national minority; belief, creed or religion; colour, ethnic origin and/or race; disability; family responsibilities and/ or pregnancy; family and/or civil status; gender expression and/or gender identity; genetic features; health status; language; migrant or refugee status; national or social origin; political or other opinion; property; sex or sex characteristics; sexual orientation or any other status.

6 REMEDIES AND ENFORCEMENT

6.1 Judicial and/or administrative procedures (Article 7 Directive 2000/43, Article 9 Directive 2000/78)

- a) Available procedures for enforcing the principle of equal treatment

In Malta, the following procedures exist for enforcing the principle of equal treatment: judicial/administrative/alternative dispute resolution such as mediation. As can be seen below, recourse can be had by people alleging discrimination to the courts, commissions and other authorities set up under law, to the Ombudsman and even to mediation.

Maltese legislation lays down various courses of action that may be followed should an individual believe that he or she was subjected to discriminatory treatment. Apart from recourse to action before the Civil Court, First Hall, sitting in its Constitutional jurisdiction, or before the Constitutional Court, there exist other bodies where an alleged victim can address his or her complaint, depending on the nature of such complaint.

These include the Industrial Tribunal (under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002), the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability (under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000), the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (under the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003), the Public Service Commission (under the Constitution of Malta), the Ombudsman (under the Ombudsman Act 1995), the Broadcasting Authority (under the Constitution of Malta), and the Employment Commission (under the Constitution of Malta), as detailed hereunder:<sup>154</sup>

- The Industrial Tribunal.<sup>155</sup> Article 30 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act states: 'A person who alleges that the employer is in breach of, or that the conditions of employment are in breach of articles 26, 27, 28 or 29, may within four months of the alleged breach, lodge a complaint to the Industrial Tribunal and the Industrial Tribunal shall hear such complaint and carry out any investigations as it shall deem fit.' On the basis of the provisions of Article 30, actions can be instituted even after the employment relationship has been terminated provided that the relative time limits are respected. Furthermore, Article 30(4) states that any action taken by a complainant in accordance with the provisions of this article shall be without prejudice to any further action that such complainant may be entitled to take under any other applicable law and shall also be without prejudice to any other action to which the respondent may be subject in accordance with any other applicable law.
- The Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability (CRPD) can initiate investigations on any matter involving an act which is allegedly in violation of the provisions of the law and may also do so on receipt of a complaint similar in nature.
- The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality investigates complaints received in respect of alleged acts of discrimination and assists any complainants in safeguarding their rights.<sup>156</sup>
- The Public Service Commission deals with and resolves complaints relating to disciplinary issues within the public service as well as those which relate to appointments and termination of employment within the same sector.

<sup>155</sup> The establishment and constitution of which are set out under Article 73 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002.

- The Ombudsman receives and investigates complaints and resolves grievances which individuals allege to have suffered from government departments and public authorities.<sup>157</sup>
- The Broadcasting Authority receives and resolves complaints regarding impartiality in the provision of broadcasting services, in respect of matters of political or industrial controversy or relating to current public policy.
- The Employment Commission is there to ensure that, in respect of employment, no distinction, exclusion or preference that is not justifiable in a democratic society is made or given in favour of or against any person by reason of his or her political opinions.

Mediation does exist under national legislation. The Employment and Industrial Relations Act does not mention mediation. However, the Mediation Act, enacted on 21 December 2004, encourages and facilitates the settlement of disputes in Malta through mediation, establishes a Malta Mediation Centre as a centre for domestic and international mediation, and regulates the conduct of the mediation process.

Article 968 of the Code of Organisation and Civil Procedure, with regard to arbitration, states that any cause concerning any matter in dispute which has been brought before a court of civil jurisdiction in Malta may be submitted at the request of all the parties for determination by arbitration. However, paragraph 2 of this article goes on to say that any submission to arbitration in regard to any dispute which concerns questions of personal status, including those relating to separation, divorce or annulment of a marriage between spouses, or in regard to things or rights which may not form the subject-matter of a contract, whether absolutely or without certain formalities required by law, is null.

b) Barriers and other deterrents faced by litigants seeking redress

Costs in a court case are regulated by Article 1004 of the Code of Organisation and Civil Procedure, which states that costs shall be taxed and levied in accordance with the Tariffs in Schedule A annexed to the Code and with regulations made by the Minister responsible for justice. The costs incurred to institute legal proceedings can at times be quite high, thereby possibly creating a barrier for people who want to lodge a complaint. Also, even though this is not really a requirement, it is advisable for a person to seek advice from a lawyer to assist in the proceedings. The Maltese legal system provides for the possibility of free legal aid for people who do not have the necessary finances to institute/defend legal proceedings.

Delays in judicial proceedings can be seen as a further deterrent, in that one is aware when proceedings will commence but not when they will end. Furthermore, in certain instances, time limits for lodging a claim or complaint must be respected, and failure to do so will nullify the lodgement of claim or complaint. Thus, in the case of proceedings under the EIRA, complaints must be lodged within four months of the alleged breach.

Aside from the costs and delays, other factors which may be seen as barriers to people seeking redress are the lack of information and also that parties try and settle disputes out of court to avoid delays and costs.

c) Number of discrimination cases brought to justice

In Malta, there are no available statistics on the number of cases related to discrimination that have been brought to justice.

- d) Registration of discrimination cases by national courts

In Malta, discrimination cases are not registered as such by national courts.

6.2 Legal standing and associations (Article 7(2) Directive 2000/43, Article 9(2) Directive 2000/78)

- a) Engaging on behalf of victims of discrimination (representing them)

In Malta, associations, organisations and trade unions are entitled to act on behalf of victims of discrimination.

Regulation 11 of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provides that nothing shall prevent any association, organisation or other legal entity from having a legitimate interest in ensuring that these regulations are complied with, or from engaging itself either on behalf of or in support of the complainant, with his or her approval, in any judicial or administrative procedure which is provided for the enforcement of obligations under these regulations.

Furthermore, Article 16 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order provides that nothing in this Order or in any other law shall prevent any association, organisation or other legal entity, having a legitimate interest in ensuring that the order is complied with, from engaging itself either on behalf or in support of the complainant, with his or her approval, in any judicial or administrative procedure provided for the enforcement of obligations under the order.

These provisions are general in nature and no limitations exist as to the conditions under which or the terms upon which representation can take place. The complainant's authorisation is required, but no specific provisions stipulate the manner in which such authorisation is to be obtained. The type of remedy which an association may seek is the remedy which may also be sought by a complainant and which, as seen above, varies depending on the legislation. There are no differences in associations' standing in terms of remedies compared to actual victims. There are no special rules on the shifting of the burden of proof where associations are engaged in proceedings. There is no known case where any association, organisation or other legal entity has brought forward proceedings.

In terms of the aforementioned provisions, added protection is afforded to complainants under the relevant legislation, where an entity having a legitimate interest in ensuring the regulations are adhered to may intervene on their behalf. The type of remedy which an association may seek is the remedy which may also be sought by a complainant and which, as seen above, varies depending on the legislation. There are no differences in associations' standing in terms of remedies compared to actual victims. There are no special rules on the shifting of the burden of proof where associations are engaged in proceedings.

- b) Engaging in support of victims of discrimination (joining existing proceedings)

In Malta, associations, organisations and trade unions are entitled to act in support of victims of discrimination.

Action may be taken in terms of Regulation 11 of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations and Article 16 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order. These provisions are general in nature and no limitations exist as to the conditions under which or the terms upon which representation can take place. The complainant's authorisation is required, but no specific provisions stipulate the manner in which such authorisation is to be obtained. The type of remedy which an association may seek is the remedy which may also be sought by a complainant and which, as seen above, varies depending on the legislation. There are no differences in associations' standing in terms of remedies compared to actual victims. There are no special rules on the shifting of the burden of proof where associations are engaged in proceedings. There is no known case where any association, organisation or other legal entity has brought forward proceedings.

Article 75(2) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 also permits action to be taken on behalf of a person who is the subject of alleged discriminatory treatment. This provides that, where it is alleged that a worker has been unfairly dismissed by an employer, or where there is an alleged breach of any obligation under Title I of the Act (thus including discriminatory treatment) or any regulations prescribed thereunder, the matter shall be referred to the Industrial Tribunal for a decision by it by means of a referral in writing made by the worker alleging the breach, or by some other person acting in the name and on behalf of such worker.

Furthermore Article 33A of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act provides that any association, organisation or any legal entity which has a legitimate interest in ensuring that the provisions of the Act are complied with, may institute, on behalf or in support of the person against whom an unlawful act of discrimination has been committed under the Act, with his or her approval, proceedings for redress before the competent court.

One entity that is legislatively empowered to assist a complainant of alleged discriminatory treatment, both in and outside court, is the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability (CRPD). This commission is empowered to provide, where appropriate, assistance, including legal and financial assistance, to people with disabilities in enforcing their rights under the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act.<sup>158</sup>

Furthermore, if it appears to the Commissioner for the Rights of Persons with Disability that a person wishes to lodge a complaint before the competent authorities under Article 32(2) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act and that that person requires assistance to formulate the complaint orally and/or in writing, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to take reasonable steps to provide appropriate assistance to that person.<sup>159</sup>

Legal Notice 13 of 2001, issued in terms of Article 33 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act and entitled Procedure for the Investigation of Complaints Regulations 2001,<sup>160</sup> provides for the procedure which is to be followed in cases in which the Commission receives a complaint from an aggrieved person, including in instances of alleged discrimination. In terms of this legal notice, the Commission shall first try and find an amicable solution to the matter. If, however, this is not forthcoming, the Commission is empowered to commence legal proceedings and refer the case to the Civil Court, First Hall.<sup>161</sup>

Also, in terms of Article 12(1)(j) of the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003, the Commissioner for the Promotion of Equality, with the assistance of the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE), is empowered to provide assistance, where and as appropriate, to people suffering from discrimination by enforcing their rights under the Act. Assistance shall be provided as and when required by the victim. Furthermore, Article 17(1) of the said Act provides that the commissioner may initiate investigations (a) on any matter involving an act or omission that is allegedly unlawful under the provisions of the Act and (b) on receipt of a written complaint by a person who claims to be the victim of an act or omission contrary to the provisions of the Act. terms of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations 2016, nothing in the regulations shall prevent any associations or organisations, including social partners or other legal entities with a legitimate interest in ensuring that the provisions of these regulations are complied with, from engaging, either on behalf or in support of the complainant, with his or her approval, in any judicial and/or administrative procedure as is provided for the enforcement of the rights under these regulations within 24 months of the alleged breach—provided that the provisions of the regulations shall apply without prejudice to any other competences and collective rights of social partners and employees’ and employers’ representatives, where applicable, including the right to take action on behalf of a collective interest.

c) Actio popularis

In Malta, national law allows the equality body, the NCPE, to act in the public interest on their own behalf, without a specific victim to support or represent (actio popularis) on any matter involving any act or omission that is allegedly unlawful in terms of law before any tribunal or court.

As seen above, in terms of Article 11 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, investigations may be commenced by the NCPE,<sup>162</sup> but no particular rules are provided as to the instances where this may be done and the type of proceedings which are to be followed.

d) Class action

In Malta, national law allows associations, organisations and trade unions to act in the interest of more than one individual victim (class action) for claims arising from the same event but no specific reference is made to class actions.

Article 11 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order seems to indicate that an action could only be made on behalf of one complainant at a time. On the other hand, there is no specific prohibition of actions being brought on behalf of more than one complainant or of class actions. This cannot be verified due to the absence of case law.<sup>163</sup>

6.3 Burden of proof (Article 8 Directive 2000/43, Article 10 Directive 2000/78)

In Malta, national law permits a partial shift of the burden of proof from the complainant to the respondent.<sup>164</sup>

The general principle under Maltese law is that the burden of proof lies on the person making the allegation.

However, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 introduced a shift in the principle of the burden of proof in cases of discrimination. Article 26(2)(a) of the Act provides that discriminatory treatment shall include the engaging or selection of a person who is less qualified than a person of the opposite sex, unless the employer can prove that the action was based on acceptable grounds related to the nature of the work or on grounds related to previous work performance and experience.

<sup>164</sup> Frederick Attard v. Malta International Airport plc. (see Section 12.2. below). In its decision, the Industrial Tribunal had stated that the principle of ‘who alleges must prove’ subsists and therefore it is for the claimant to prove the discrimination. The claimant argued that this was not the case as Directive 2000/78/EC states clearly that the opposite is, in fact, the case and it is for the accused to prove that they did not commit the alleged discrimination. The Court of Appeal agreed with this interpretation but added that this subsists only once the person alleging the discrimination has established the facts which presume the discrimination in some way.

Regulation 10(3) of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations provides that, in any proceedings brought by a person claiming discriminatory treatment in respect of his/her employment, it shall be sufficient for the claimant to establish facts from which it may be presumed that he or she has suffered discriminatory treatment and it shall become incumbent on the defendant to prove that such treatment was justified in accordance with these regulations, in the absence of which the tribunal or court shall uphold the complaint of the claimant.

Regulation 10(3) correctly implements what is laid down in both directives. Directives 2000/43/EC and 2000/78/EC further provide that it is up to the Member State whether or not to introduce rules of evidence which are more favourable to claimants.

In terms of Article 34A of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000, where, in any judicial proceedings, other than criminal proceedings, taken in terms of the Act for redress following an unlawful act of discrimination, the person commencing the proceedings establishes facts before the courts from which it may be presumed that there was discrimination, it shall be for the defendant to prove that there was no breach of the Act.

Similarly, Article 13 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007 provides for the shifting of the burden of proof in that, if a person who considers that he or she has been discriminated against establishes, before a court or other competent authority, facts from which it may be presumed that there has been direct or indirect discrimination against him or her, the burden of proving that there has been no discrimination shall lie on the person, establishment or entity against whom the allegation of discrimination is directed. This rule shall also apply where the NCPE itself takes action to refer an allegation of discrimination to the competent court on behalf of the person discriminated against or where it intervenes in support of a person alleging discrimination and taking action for redress.

In terms of Article 19(2) of the Equality for Men and Women Act 2003, which was amended in 2014, the burden of proof has been shifted. The claimant or the person instituting the said proceedings is to establish, before the court or before such other competent authority, facts from which it may be presumed that he or she has been treated less favourably, directly or indirectly, on the basis of sex or because of family responsibilities, and the defendant or the person against whom such proceedings are brought must prove that there has been no breach of the principle of equal treatment, or that such less favourable treatment was justified in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

6.4 Victimisation (Article 9 Directive 2000/43, Article 11 Directive 2000/78)

In Malta, there are legal measures of protection against victimisation.

Article 28 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act provides that if any person (a) files a complaint to the lawful authorities or initiates or participates in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of the Act, or (b) discloses information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body, regarding alleged illegal or corrupt activities being committed by his/her employer or by people acting in the employer's name and interests, it is unlawful to victimise such a person for having acted accordingly.

This provision goes further than is required by Article 11 of the Employment Equality Directive, since it relates not only to breaches of the obligation of equal treatment, but to any breach of the provisions of the Act.

The wording of Article 28, particularly in the case mentioned in (b) above, appears to extend protection against victimisation to persons other than the complainant.

In line with the provisions of the Racial Equality Directive, Article 7 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order provides that it shall not be lawful to victimise any person for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of these regulations, or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body, regarding alleged acts of discrimination or discriminatory treatment.

Similarly, Article 5(3) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act provides that it shall not be lawful to victimise any person for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of the Act, or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body, regarding alleged discriminatory behaviour, activities or practices.

Furthermore, in terms of Article 4 of the Equality for Men and Women Act, it shall be unlawful for employers to discriminate, directly or indirectly, against a person in the arrangements made to determine or in determining who should be offered employment or in the terms and conditions on which the employment is offered or in the determination of who should be dismissed from employment. Furthermore, employers shall also be deemed to have discriminated against a person if such employers alter the working conditions or the terms of employment of employees to the detriment of such employees after such employees have invoked any right accorded to them under this Act or claimed the performance in their favour of any obligation or duty under this Act.

In terms of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations 2016, victimisation is defined as less favourable treatment for having made a complaint to the lawful authorities or for having initiated or participated in proceedings for redress on grounds of alleged breach of the provisions of these regulations, or for having disclosed information, confidential or otherwise, to a designated public regulatory body regarding alleged illegal or corrupt activities being committed by any person falling within the scope of these regulations or by persons acting in such a person's name and interests. Moreover, Regulation 7 provides that victimisation shall constitute prohibited conduct under these regulations and shall be tantamount to discrimination under the Equality for Men and Women Act.

6.5 Sanctions and remedies (Article 15 Directive 2000/43, Article 17 Directive 2000/78)

a) Applicable sanctions in cases of discrimination – in law and in practice

In terms of Article 30 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, if the Industrial Tribunal<sup>165</sup> upholds a person's allegations that his/her employer is in breach of, or that the conditions of employment are in breach of, specific provisions, namely: Articles 26 (discrimination and gender equality), 27 (work of equal value), 28 (victimisation) or 29 (harassment), the tribunal may take such measures as it deems necessary, including the cancellation of any contract of service or of any clause in a contract or in a collective agreement which is discriminatory, and may order the payment of reasonable sums of money as compensation to the aggrieved party.<sup>166</sup> Furthermore, Article 48(4) of the Act

<sup>165</sup> In the case of hearing and deciding cases of alleged discrimination, breaches of the principle of work of equal value, victimisation or harassment, the Industrial Tribunal shall be composed of a chairperson alone.

<sup>166</sup> It is to be noted that, in terms of Article 1045(1) of the Civil Code (Laws of Malta, Chapter 16), damage which is to be made good by the person responsible for causing such damage shall consist of the actual loss which the act will have directly caused to the injured party, the expenses which the latter may have been provides that any regulation made under the Act may provide for any matter relating to liability for the observance of such regulations, and the persons who may be liable, and for any matter relating to the enforcement of the said regulations, including, but not limited to, the imposition of a fine not exceeding EUR 11 647 in respect of any contravention of, or failure to comply with, the provisions of such regulations.

In terms of Article 15 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, without prejudice to the provisions of Article 30 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, a person who alleges that any other person has committed in his or her regard any act which, under any of the provisions of the order is unlawful, shall have a right of action before the competent court of civil jurisdiction, requesting the court to order the defendant to desist from such unlawful acts and, where applicable, to order the payment of compensation for such damage suffered through such unlawful act.

In terms of Article 50 of the Employment and Training Services Act, any person guilty of an offence against, inter alia, Article 15 of the Act<sup>167</sup> shall be liable, on conviction, to pay a fine of not less than EUR 2 500 but not exceeding EUR 15 000.

Under Article 34 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, a claim by a person having a legal interest in the matter, made personally or through his or her legal representative, that another person has committed an unlawful act of discrimination against him or her, as provided for under the Act, may be brought for damages, as with any other civil action; and any damages in respect of an unlawful act of discrimination may include compensation for moral damages, whether or not they include compensation under any other provision, up to a maximum of EUR 2 500, as the court may declare. It is to be noted that this is the first instance where the law in Malta has specifically provided for the award of moral damages to an aggrieved party. Furthermore, any association, organisation or any legal entity which has a legitimate interest in ensuring that the provisions of the Act are complied with may institute proceedings for redress before the competent court.

In the Criminal Code, Article 82A imposes imprisonment for a term of six to 18 months for a person who has been convicted for using threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, or displaying any written or printed material which is threatening, abusive or insulting, or has otherwise conducted himself in such a manner, with intent thereby to stir up violence or racial hatred against another person or group on the grounds of gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, ethnic origin, religion or belief or political or other opinion, or whereby such violence or racial hatred is likely, having regard to all the circumstances, to be stirred up.<sup>168</sup> Furthermore, the Criminal Code provides that any sentence for a punishment established by law shall always be deemed to have been awarded without prejudice to the right of civil action.<sup>169</sup>

In terms of Regulation 5 of the Exercise of Rights Conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations, a person who alleges that any other person has committed in his or her regard any unlawful act under these regulations shall, within 24 months of the alleged breach, have a right of action before the competent court of civil jurisdiction requesting the court to order the defendant to desist from the unlawful act and to order the payment of compensation for any damage suffered through the unlawful act.

compelled to incur in consequence of the damage, the loss of actual wages or other earnings and the loss of future earnings arising from any permanent incapacity, total or partial, which the act may have caused. Thus, only real damages could be awarded. There have been very few cases concerning violations of human rights where moral damages have been awarded.

<sup>167</sup> This provision deals with the engagement of employees by the Government and Government-owned or controlled bodies and companies.

<sup>168</sup> 'Violence or racial hatred' means 'violence or racial hatred against a person or against a group of persons in Malta defined by reference to gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, national or ethnic origin, citizenship, religion or belief or political or other opinion'.

b) Ceiling and amount of compensation

No maximum amount of compensation is laid down under Article 30 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act or under Article 15 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, and there have not been any reported decisions in this respect. These are two of the few instances where the victim can be awarded compensation since, in the majority of cases, the perpetrator of the discriminatory treatment can be ordered to pay a fine. This fine is paid to the state.

Under Article 34 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, a claim may be made by a person having a legal interest in the matter, either personally or through his or her legal representative, that another person has committed an unlawful act of discrimination against him or her, as provided for under the Act. He or she may bring a claim for damages as with any other civil action, and any damages in respect of an unlawful act of discrimination may include compensation for moral damages, whether or not they include compensation under any other provision, up to a maximum of EUR 2 500, as the court may declare. It is to be noted that this is the first instance where the law in Malta has specifically provided for the award of moral damages to an aggrieved party.

c) Assessment of the sanctions

There have been no cases, whether before the courts or before the Ombudsman, on the amount of compensation to be awarded. Therefore, there is no publicly available evidence to show how effective, proportionate or dissuasive the available sanctions are. It is felt, though, especially with regard to the sanctions under Article 30 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act and under Article 15 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order, that since they do not provide for a capping on the damages which may be awarded, they are effective and sufficient.

7 BODIES FOR THE PROMOTION OF EQUAL TREATMENT (Article 13 Directive 2000/43)

- a) Body/bodies designated for the promotion of equal treatment irrespective of racial/ethnic origin according to Article 13 of the Racial Equality Directive

By virtue of the provisions of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order 2007, the remit of the Commissioner for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women covers the promotion of equal treatment irrespective of racial or ethnic origin within the meaning of the provisions of the order and to issues of compliance with, and the enforcement of rights under, the provisions of the order, which functions shall continue to be exercised with the assistance of the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE), constituted under Article 11 of the Equality for Men and Women Act.<sup>170</sup>

By virtue of Act IX of 2012 amending the Equality for Men and Women Act, the remit of the Commission was extended to cover discrimination based on sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, or gender identity. It was again extended in 2015 to include discrimination based on gender expression or sex characteristics. This was further extended in 2016 to the exercising of the rights of workers moving within the EU.<sup>171</sup> The scope of the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality is intended to be widened further so that it will become a National Human Rights and Equality Commission (NHREC),<sup>172</sup> acting as a national human rights institution as well as an equality body, in accordance with the provisions established by European directives on equal treatment. Hence, the NCPE will be able not only to build on work which has already been identified, but also to expand and strengthen its work and responsibilities in the field of human rights and equality.

In addition, there are two other relevant bodies dealing with discriminations issues: the CRPD (for disability-related issues) and the Ombudsman (for action taken by public authorities). These bodies complement the work of the NCPE on non-discrimination and equality.

In terms of Article 21 of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act, there shall be a Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability (CRPD, formerly the NCPD), which shall be composed of the Commissioner for the Rights of Persons with Disability and the Council for the Rights of Persons with Disability. The competencies of the Commission are wide, and they clearly serve to combat any form of disability discrimination, in particular by raising awareness and fostering respect for the rights and dignity of people with disabilities; by combating stereotypes, prejudices and harmful practices relating to people with disabilities, including those based on gender and age, in all areas of life; by raising awareness about the capabilities and contributions of people with disabilities; and by providing an independent mechanism to promote, protect and monitor the implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and any of its Optional Protocols as ratified by Malta.

<sup>170</sup> Although the Commission is generally referred to as the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (even on its website), Article 11 of Chapter 456 of the Laws of Malta (in terms of which the Commission is constituted) states that, 'The Prime Minister shall upon the advice of the Minister appoint a Commission to be called the National Commission for the Promotion of Equality for Men and Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission") ...'

<sup>171</sup> By virtue of Legal Notice 173 of 2016 entitled 'The exercise of rights conferred on Workers (Freedom of Movement) Regulations'. People who feel that they have encountered or are encountering obstacles to exercising their rights, or who have had or are having their right to free movement restricted without justification, shall have a right to file a complaint with the commissioner, even after the relationship in which the obstacle or restriction is alleged to have occurred has ended, and the commissioner shall initiate the proceedings prescribed in the Act or in any other applicable law or regulation.

Similarly, on the basis of the Ombudsman Act 1995, should a person feel that s/he has been subjected to discriminatory treatment (particularly on the basis of racial or ethnic origin) at the hands of the Government of Malta or any statutory body or partnership in which the Government or said body has effective control, or at the hands of any local council or its committees, including officers and staff members, this person can ask the Ombudsman to investigate the matter in accordance with the Ombudsman Act 1995. The complainant shall file his/her complaint before the Ombudsman, who will then investigate the case and make recommendations to the Government. Such recommendations are not binding, however.

b) Political, economic and social context for the designated body

The designated body, the NCPE, is supported by the Government and by other national institutions. There has not been any political hostility towards or interference in the governance of the designated body.

There is nothing to show that the Government has substantially varied the budget allocated to the designated body. This has remained stable in recent years.

Popular debate has always been supportive of equality and diversity and of the work of the designated body.

c) Institutional architecture

The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality is not, and does not form part of, a body with multiple mandates.

The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality works to ensure that Maltese society is a society free from any form of discrimination based on: (i) sex/gender and family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, and gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics in employment; banks and financial institutions, as well as education; (ii) racial / ethnic origin and gender in the provision of goods and services and their supply; and (iii) freedom of movement for workers in the EU. The Commission therefore is mandated and dedicates its resources to the equality/anti-discrimination mandate.

Given its mandate in the field of equality and non-discrimination, the Commission has widespread visibility in the field.

d) Status of the designated body/bodies – general independence

i) Status of the body

The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE) is currently an autonomous body. It was officially set up and started operating in January 2004. The Commission has a legal personality, separate from that of the Government, and its judicial representation rests in the commissioner. It is composed of a chairperson, who is the commissioner, and six other members, at least three of whom must be women and one of the members must be a person with disability. No quotas are prescribed for members coming from a particular ethnic minority background. All the members of the Commission are appointed by the Prime Minister from among such persons appearing to him or her to be best suited to dealing with issues of equality for men and women and/or administrative issues connected therewith. Every member of the Commission shall hold office for a term of two years and may be re-appointed at the end of their term of office. The Prime Minister may terminate the appointment of members of the Commission if s/he is satisfied that: (a) without the consent of the Commission, its members failed to attend the meetings of the Commission during a continuous period of six months; (b) its members are undischarged bankrupt persons, or have made an arrangement with their creditors, or are insolvent or have been found guilty of any voluntary crime against the person; or (c) its members are incapable of carrying out their duties.

ii) Independence of the body

The Commission is answerable to the minister responsible for equality, and it is funded from funds allocated to it by the minister for the promotion of equality out of funds voted by Parliament for activities under the ministry or out of funds that may be donated or allocated to it from other sources in Malta or abroad.

Despite being dependant on Government funding, the NCPE is deemed to be independent and autonomous. To date, nothing has ever been published to infer that such independence is hampered or not recognised, or that the said entity lacks sufficient and adequate resources to effectively address all complaints which are brought before it. Likewise, it is evident from the reports detailing the work that the Commission carries out each year that its work covers all areas of its remit. The NCPE not only deals with complaints which are brought before it, but carries out research, provides consultancy services and carries out investigations within its remit.

e) Grounds covered by the designated body/bodies

The remit of the NCPE relates to discrimination issues based on sex, family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics, actual or potential pregnancy or childbirth, and the freedom of movement of workers within the EU. The Commission deals with migrant issues linked with discrimination based on racial or ethnic origin and deals with such issues on a par with any form of discrimination suffered or alleged by any persons in Malta. There is no publicly available information on how the employees within the Commission manage their work internally, but it does not seem that there are different departments or service desks dealing with the different areas. Likewise, there is no evidence to show that the Commission dedicates particular or greater attention to one or more areas.

f) Competences of the designated body/bodies – and their independent exercise

i) Independent assistance to victims

In Malta, the designated body has the competence to provide independent assistance to victims in bringing forward and defending their claims.

The current primary task of the NCPE is to monitor the implementation of the Act to promote equality for men and women, to promote equal treatment irrespective of racial or ethnic origin, to promote equality in spheres where it may be lacking and to ensure compliance with the provisions of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order. The Commission seeks to ensure that Maltese society is a society free from any form of discrimination in all sectors and at all levels with respect to training and employment and to the provision of services and benefits. It has the competence to provide assistance to victims, to conduct surveys and publish reports and to issue recommendations on discrimination issues.

The current competencies<sup>173</sup> of the Commission include the following:

- to investigate complaints of a more particular or individual character to determine whether the provisions of the Act and the order are being contravened with respect to the complainant and, where deemed appropriate, to mediate with regard to such complaints;
- to inquire into and advise or make determinations on any matter relating to equality between men and women as may be referred to it by the Minister;
- to provide assistance, where and as appropriate, to people suffering from discrimination in enforcing their rights under the Act and the order;
- to keep under review the working of the Act and the order and, where deemed necessary, at the request of the Minister or otherwise, to submit proposals for the amendment or substitution of their provisions; and
- to perform such other function as may be assigned by law or such other functions as may be assigned by the Minister.

The NCPE has published several publications and leaflets promoting equality and non-discrimination, which are available to the general public as well as to public and private sector organisations. Each year, it publishes an annual report setting out its activities over the previous year.

The NCPE has been vested with the required authority to act in an independent manner. This independence allows it to act effectively. It also has the required competent resources to be able to act effectively.

ii) Independent surveys and reports

In Malta, the designated body has the competence to conduct independent surveys and publish independent reports. The designated body publishes regular reports with detailed information on its work, in particular in its annual reports, which set out in detail, amongst other things, the number of claims received, investigated and closed, including the relative statistics.

The NCPE has been vested with the required authority to act in an independent manner. This independence allows it to act effectively. It also has the required competent resources to be able to act effectively. In cases where it requires additional expertise and resources, it teams up with other organisations.

iii) Recommendations

In Malta, the designated body has the competence to issue independent recommendations on discrimination issues. The body is seen as a watchdog and does express itself, even publicly through the media, on matters which fall within its remit.

The NCPE has been instrumental in providing recommendations for reform, where required, through its competent and skilled resources.

iv) Other competencies

The NCPE carries out awareness-raising and promotion campaigns to increase education, training and awareness of the rights of all. These fall within the competencies of the body and, judging from the amount of work done each day, as highlighted in the NCPE's annual reports, this is done in an effective and independent manner.

<sup>173</sup> Article 12 of the Equality of Men and Women Act and Article 10 of the Equal Treatment of Persons Order.

g) Legal standing of the designated body/bodies

In Malta, the designated body has legal standing to bring discrimination complaints (on behalf of identified victim(s)) or to intervene in legal cases concerning discrimination.

If it appears to the commissioner that people who wish to make a complaint require assistance to formulate that complaint, the commissioner is to take or order the taking of such reasonable steps as may be necessary to assist such people in making the complaint. Moreover, should the Commission become aware of any alleged discriminatory act or practice hindering equality within society, the commissioner may deem it necessary to initiate ex officio investigations on any matter falling within NCPE's remit.

Following collection of all possible evidence upon receipt of a complaint, the NCPE commissioner issues an opinion outlining whether it is of the opinion that there was a breach of the Equality for Men and Women Act. The opinion is then sent to the complainant and to the respondent. The commissioner will submit opinions to the Commissioner of Police in cases of criminal offence. It may also refer the case to the Industrial Tribunal or a civil court, as well as offering mediation between the parties. The Commission may furthermore intervene in judicial proceedings on behalf of or in support of a complainant. Therefore, the Commission receives complaints and also commences ex officio investigations on a regular basis, as detailed in its annual reports and other publications.<sup>174</sup>

h) Quasi-judicial competences

In Malta, the relevant body is not a quasi-judicial institution.

The NCPE is not a judicial body but, within its remit, it may assist people in bringing forward actions before the competent judicial authorities, including by assisting with investigations and making recommendations. Actions brought before the national courts are concluded with binding decisions from which appeals may be lodged within the parameters stipulated at law.

i) Registration by the body/bodies of complaints and decisions

Statistics for the complaints investigated are not published on a regular basis, but they are kept by the NCPE and fed into reports on particular aspects of equality and conveyed to the National Statistics Office as and when required. In its annual reports, the NCPE merely makes reference to the number of complaints received and splits them up by gender of the complainant and according to the grounds on which the complaints are based.

j) Stakeholder engagement

The NCPE organises a number of conferences to raise awareness among its target audiences on equality-related issues, as well as to discuss its ongoing work. It holds an annual conference to outline its work in the preceding year and to share this information with the various stakeholders. The NCPE's Commissioner and staff members have participated in various local and EU/international meetings and conferences. These meetings and conferences are organised by various stakeholders, NGOs, government institutions and private sector bodies. The role of the NCPE at such meetings is to continuously work on strengthening and making more visible the equality agenda, highlighting recent and available data, policies and laws relevant to the subject under discussion. The NCPE is also a member of various committees and boards, and participates in their respective events. From the various activities the NCPE organises and participates in, it is clear that the level of engagement with stakeholders is continuous and effective.

<sup>174</sup> In 2017, the NCPE received 39 new complaints, of which 30 were lodged by one individual and did not fall within the remit of the NCPE. Of the new complaints, three dealt with gender, three dealt with race/ethnic origin, two concerned age and one was on religion/belief.

k) Roma and Travellers

There are no Roma or Travellers in Malta.

8 IMPLEMENTATION ISSUES

8.1 Dissemination of information, dialogue with NGOs and between social partners

- a) Dissemination of information about legal protection against discrimination (Article 10 Directive 2000/43 and Article 12 Directive 2000/78)

Measures have been taken to disseminate information about legal protection against discrimination in terms of Article 10 Directive 2000/43/EC and Article 12 Directive 2000/78/EC.

In 2017 as reproduced in its annual report,<sup>175</sup> the NCPE continued to offer and deliver training on diversity, equality and non-discrimination to a wide range of participants, including students, employers, employees in the private sector, public officers and asylum seekers. In 2017, the NCPE gave 63 training sessions involving over 1 300 participants from the public and private sectors, ranging from officers in managerial positions and clerks to students attending Jobsplus, MCAST and university courses.

Training given by the NCPE focuses on the following subjects:

- Equality law: The basic principles of Maltese equality legislation and EU Directives are explained and discussed. NCPE trainers outline the different grounds of discrimination in Maltese law as well as the different spheres it covers.
- Different social identities: The different characteristics protected by law are explained in detail in the context that equality is more than simple non-discrimination.
- Harassment and sexual harassment: Definitions of harassment and sexual harassment are discussed in the context of their being a serious form of discrimination, and sexual harassment a crime. The difference between the two is elucidated and examples provided. The obligations emanating from law related to addressing and preventing sexual harassment are discussed, and the NCPE outlines practical ways to deal with harassment as well as good practices for its prevention.
- Diversity management: The term diversity management is discussed in its wider context. Diversity management is not about having different rules for different groups, but is about the valorisation of different identities and the recognition that diversity can lead to better work processes and outcomes. Practical ways of managing diversity are outlined and discussed with the participants.
- Gender mainstreaming: The meaning of the strategy of gender mainstreaming is explained and the participants are guided through the gender mainstreaming process.

A Business Breakfast for employers organised on 23 January 2017 hosted around 80 employers. The event focused on the different types of Family-Friendly Measures (FFMs), their economic and financial impact, employee wellbeing and the benefits as well as obstacles faced by both employers and employees.

The Business Breakfast was followed by two Consultation Sessions for Employers held in April-May and September 2017 where 75 participants had the opportunity to debate the issues concerning the provision and uptake of FFMs further whilst discussing the management of flexible working arrangements. Through a workshop, employers and HR managers had the opportunity to draft a Work-Life Balance Policy that can be applicable to any business or entity. The policy outlines the family-friendly measures offered by the company as well as the strategy and structure for their effective implementation.

Participants were further encouraged to contact NCPE for further assistance in drafting a Work-life Balance Policy for their workplace.

The NCPE in collaboration with the Drama Unit organised a series of drama sessions in secondary schools. These sessions targeted over 2 000 students aged 14-16 years, in 14 schools around Malta and Gozo, with 22 performances. The aims of these sessions were to raise awareness on the sharing of caring and domestic duties within a family; to question traditional stereotypes associated with men and women; and to educate students on work-life balance measures.

An integral part of the NCPE's mandate is to promote equality and non-discrimination among the general public. The key messages include: the meaning of discrimination and the fact that it is unlawful, highlighting existing inequalities, the promotion of positive action and the empowerment of people to seek redress by lodging a complaint to the NCPE's commissioner or through other available means. The NCPE conveys these messages through various sources. Most notably in 2017, the NCPE carried out three awareness-raising campaigns through the EU-funded project Equality Beyond Gender Roles. Throughout 2017, the NCPE continued disseminating information and raising awareness on rights and responsibilities related to equality through various means of communication including targeted messages to the general public and stakeholders on specific topics and on its work and remit. The NCPE's commitment to making effective use of the media is reflected in the total number of contributions in the local media, which amounted to 103, during this year.

The NCPE gave its input to several public consultation processes at a national level. Input was provided to both consultation documents directly related to the NCPE's work, such as the ongoing consultation on the HREC and Equality Bills, as well as to other documents dealing with subjects such as sport, education and the Budget. Throughout 2017 the NCPE contributed to the following documents at a national level:

- A National Policy for Sport in Malta and Gozo;
- Sick Leave for the Care of Children;
- The 'Protection of Vulnerable Older Persons and Adult Persons with Disability';
- Pre-Budget Document 2018;
- University of Malta Act: Increased access, better quality - A vision for tomorrow's University in the modern world;
- The Ethics Curriculum;
- National Standards for the Child Adoption Process.

In 2017, the NCPE contributed to the consultation process for EU and international documents and carried out desk research on different topics. In addition, throughout 2017 NCPE contributed its input to various bodies operating at an EU level, via questionnaires, surveys, reports, studies, meetings and conferences.

For its part, following Malta's ratification of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disability, the CRPD assumed the new role of providing an independent mechanism to protect, promote and monitor the implementation of the Convention. In order to be able to do this in the best possible manner, the CRPD ensures that it stays abreast of the latest updates in the disability sector in both local and international contexts. On an international level, the CRPD maintains close contact with the European Disability Forum, the Disability Rights Committee within the Equality and Human Rights Commission of the United Kingdom, Disability Wales and Inclusion Europe. The CRPD<sup>176</sup> continues to carry out various campaigns and training and dialogue sessions. The CRPD also contributes to the work carried out against discrimination at an international level, including in the European context.

The CRPD offers training on the equality of people with disabilities. This training is provided to different types of audiences and is carried out with the full involvement of people with disabilities and the parents of people with disabilities who cannot represent themselves.<sup>177</sup> This training complements that provided at university level by the disability studies unit within the Faculty for Social Wellbeing at the University of Malta. During 2017 the CRPD Disability Equality Training material was reviewed and updated. The Disability Studies Department at the University was consulted during this period. The training now includes video clips relating to treating people with a disability with respect.

- b) Measures to encourage dialogue with NGOs with a view to promoting the principle of equal treatment (Article 12 Directive 2000/43 and Article 14 Directive 2000/78)

Measures have been taken to encourage dialogue with NGOs with a view to promoting the principle of equal treatment (Article 12 Directive 2000/43/EC and Article 14 Directive 2000/78/EC).

Publicity, awareness campaigns, social dialogue and training are carried out locally by NGOs in conjunction with Government departments or other organisations and entities (some of which are statutorily regulated and others not), by other NGOs or independently.

In Malta, there are various non-governmental organisations involved in raising awareness of social issues. NGOs in Malta are regulated by Act XXII of 2007, the Voluntary Organisations Act. This Act was brought into force on 11 December 2007. The principal NGOs in Malta are ground-specific, and they work towards combating discrimination in specific areas only. The NGOs act very subjectively and independently of each other, and it is therefore rather difficult to obtain objective information from them. There is no NGO which could be said to cover all grounds of discrimination.

One such organisation is the Malta Gay Rights Movement (MGRM), which represents the Maltese LGBTIQ community. The MGRM continues to create awareness of its community's rights. Another NGO involved in helping and promoting awareness, in this case on the grounds of race and ethnic origin, is the Jesuit Refugee Service.<sup>178</sup> Aditus Foundation is a non-governmental organisation established in 2011 with a mission to monitor, report and act on access to human rights in Malta. Its work promotes a society where everyone is able to access and enjoy all their fundamental human rights, and access to justice and remedies should be provided in case of violations.

Founded in 2007, the People for Change Foundation's mission is to undertake research, advocacy and proactive action to promote social cohesion, respect for Human Rights and empowerment. People for Change works in the field of migration, asylum and race in Malta and across the EU, in addition to on-the-ground legal and social research. It is a human rights think tank based in Malta which compels evidence-based and data-driven policy and action to promote human rights through research and analysis, lobbying, advocacy and capacity building.

In 2017, Spark 15, a Maltese NGO geared to empower young refugees and migrants to actively participate in achieving a more inclusive society, was set up.<sup>179</sup> Its purpose is to achieve greater diversity among young people through dialogue.

<sup>178</sup> The mandate of the Jesuit Refugee Service is to accompany, serve and defend the cause of forcibly displaced people. The JRS was set up in Malta in 1993 to support the first influx of asylum seekers to the island from crisis areas in the Mediterranean and Eastern Europe, mainly Iraq and Bosnia. The situation is now very different, with asylum seekers and forcibly displaced people arriving mostly by boat from the African coast in thousands every year.

<sup>179</sup> Spark 15 has the support of the President's Foundation for the Wellbeing of Society and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees.

- c) Measures to promote dialogue between social partners to give effect to the principle of equal treatment within workplace practices, codes of practice, workforce monitoring (Article 11 Directive 2000/43 and Article 13 Directive 2000/78)

Measures have also been taken to promote dialogue between social partners to give effect to the principle of equal treatment within workplace practices, codes of practice and workforce monitoring (Article 11 Directive 2000/43/EC and Article 13 Directive 2000/78/EC).

There are various statutory bodies which, although they were not specifically created to promote social dialogue, contribute towards social dialogue by virtue of their composition. These bodies are composed of, inter alia, representatives of Government, employers and employees. They include:

- The National Employment Authority, created under the terms of the Employment and Training Services Act 2018,<sup>180</sup> which is composed of three independent people, with two other people appearing before the President of Malta to represent the interests of employers and two other people appearing before the President of Malta to represent the interests of employees; and
- The Employment Relations Board created under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, 2002.

To date, however, neither body has been active.

The Malta Council for Economic and Social Development Act 2001<sup>181</sup> provides for the setting up of a Civil Society Committee (CSC) within the MCESD.<sup>182</sup> The CSC is made up of a core representation of civil society.<sup>183</sup>

- d) Addressing the situation of Roma and Travellers

There are no Roma issues in Malta as there are no Roma.

8.2 Compliance (Article 14 Directive 2000/43, Article 16 Directive 2000/78)

- a) Mechanisms

It should be noted that Regulation 13 of Legal Notice 461 of 2004 provides that any provisions contrary to the principle of equal treatment in individual or collective contracts or agreements, internal rules of undertakings, or rules governing any registered organisation in terms of the Act, shall, on the entry into force of these regulations, be considered null and void.

Furthermore, Article 6 of the Constitution of Malta provides that the Constitution is the supreme law of Malta and that, therefore, if any other law is inconsistent with this

<sup>181</sup> Malta, Council for Economic and Social Development Act (Act XV of 2001), Laws of Malta, Chapter 431. The mission statement of the MCESD is that it is 'a Consultative and Advisory Body to the Government on issues relating to the sustainable economic and social development of Malta, whilst providing a forum for consultation and social dialogue between social partners and, where necessary, with Civil Society organisations'.

<sup>182</sup> The Chairperson or the Deputy Chairperson of the MCESD chairs the meetings of the CSC.

<sup>183</sup> The CSC must include the chairpersons of the following organisations: the Local Councils Association, the National Youth Council, the National Council for the Elderly, the Consumers' Association, the Commission for the Rights of Persons with Disability and the Commission for the Advancement of Women. On the recommendations of the CSC, the MCESD approved the inclusion of the following NGOs to sit on the CSC: the Federation of Professional Bodies, the National Council of Women, the Alliance of Pensioners' Organisations, a representative of the island of Gozo and a representative of environmental groups.

Constitution, it shall prevail and the other law shall, to the extent of the inconsistency, be void. Legal practitioners do not share the same opinion on this matter. Whereas some believe that if the courts declare that a law is contrary to the principle of equal treatment, such a law will not be abolished ipso jure but would have to be repealed by Parliament, others hold that, once the Constitutional Court has declared a law unconstitutional, it is inconceivable that a Maltese Court would apply or enforce such a law.

Furthermore, the second proviso to Article 27 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act 2002 provides that any distinction between classes of employment based on discriminatory treatment, other than in accordance with the provisions of the Act or any other law, shall not have effect. Refer also to Section 5.5 of this report in this regard.

b) Rules contrary to the principle of equality

There do not appear to be any laws in force which go against the principle of equality.

9 COORDINATION AT NATIONAL LEVEL

In terms of the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, responsibility lies with the Minister for Education and Employment, with the Ministry for Family and Social Solidarity for the Equal Opportunities (People with a Disability) Act and with the Ministry for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties in terms of the Equality for Men and Women Act.

The National Commission for the Promotion of Equality (NCPE) contracted the Equality Research Consortium to develop, through research and consultation, a framework leading to a national action plan against racism and xenophobia (NAPARX) in Malta. The NAPARX, which was published in December 2010, but never endorsed or adopted by the authorities, had a number of strategic objectives, as well as specific initiatives to be achieved and implemented over a three-year period. It sought to build upon the existing policy, legal and institutional framework, as well as the various initiatives that have been undertaken by a wide spectrum of stakeholders, ensuring that these are used to their full potential.

The Action Plan was strategic in nature, providing a roadmap towards the achievement of its aims and objectives. It was to be seen as fluid and, as such, should have been able to adapt to emerging trends and realities. It adopted a human rights-based approach – a strategic mainstreaming process intended to permeate all levels of national structures. The plan sought to take into account the different forms of racism experienced by the various minorities, as well as the different levels of racism at both an individual and institutional/systemic level. This action plan addressed various minority groups including ethnic minorities and linguistic minorities as well as religious minorities. The action plan sought to combat racism and xenophobia as well as promote a more inclusive and intercultural society through a proactive framework. Whilst it addressed issues of investigation and redress, the priority was on creating an environment that does not accept the presence of racism and where discriminatory treatment is neither accepted nor tolerated. As such, the plan sought to address the 'four Ps', namely: prevention, protection, prosecution and partnership. It may be noted, however, that the action plan was not formally adopted by the national authorities, although it still serves as a set of guidelines for the NCPE in carrying out its work.

On 24 February 2014, the Ministry for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties (MSDC) in Malta launched a consultation process with the aim of strengthening human rights and equality legislation in Malta. The Government expressed its belief that both the current legislative and infrastructural frameworks required reinforcement so as to provide Malta with an adequate human rights and equality mechanism.

In November 2015 a Human Rights and Integration Directorate was set up within the framework of the Ministry for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties.

The intention is to gather feedback with a view to strengthening human rights and equality legislation, as well as strengthening the institutions that enforce this legislation so that these institutions are in conformity with both the United Nations model of a national human rights institution (NHRI), laid out in the Paris Principles, and the European Union's equality body requirements, laid out in the EU equality directives, namely the Racial Equality Directive, the Gender Goods and Services Directive and the Gender 'Recast' Directive. This initial scoping consultation was launched to collect input from the general public, civil society organisations, trade unions, business organisations, political parties, governmental institutions and other stakeholders able to offer a contribution. This phase of the consultation is now closed, and the submissions received were reviewed with a report issued thereon.<sup>184</sup> The Bill on the Equality Act has been published, but this has not yet become law.

10 CURRENT BEST PRACTICES

The CRPD continues to cooperate with the Malta Competition and Consumer Affairs Authority with the aim that the Access for All Guidelines relating to accessibility shall begin to be considered as national standards. As part of its enforcement procedures, the Malta Environment and Planning Authority is obliged to consult with the CRPD in relation to applications for the development of buildings that are open to the public and are in major use. Furthermore, a collaborative operation group comprising the CRPD, Malta Environment and Planning Authority (MEPA) and the Parliamentary Secretariat for the Rights of People with a Disability and Active Ageing was set up to strengthen coordination with regard to vetting procedures carried out by the CRPD on plans submitted to MEPA.

Throughout 2017, a number of meetings were held by officials from the CRPD on various issues including education, accessibility, employment and road safety for the benefit of people with disabilities.<sup>185</sup>

The Equality Mark Certification awarded by the NCPE continues to gain popularity among organisations that strive to strengthen gender equality in employment. More companies have been recognised for their commitment to secure a safe place of work. As of 2017, 80 organisations have been awarded such certification. In 2017, 13 new companies received certification while 13 companies were re-certified.<sup>186</sup> More organisations are in the process of being awarded the Equality Mark.<sup>187</sup>

As mentioned in the section on Positive Action, the Government has introduced measures to enforce the employment quota. Through this scheme, the Government seeks to ensure the implementation and enforcement of the 1967 law requiring companies employing 20 or more people to employ people with disabilities. The law now provides that failure to abide by the quota renders companies liable to pay a yearly compensation fee.

Similarly, special arrangements exist to assist people with disabilities to access employment in the public sector. Registered people with disabilities who do not satisfy all the eligibility requirements in calls for applications but who are essentially capable of carrying out the duties attached to a particular post/position are allowed to ask for special consideration when applying for posts/positions in the Public Service.<sup>188</sup>

The Business Promotion Act Regulations 2000, which may also be considered as positive action taken, provide fiscal incentives to employers which create jobs, employ and train people over 40 years of age. If such people are registered disabled, these incentives are further increased. There is no obligation for employers to take action to benefit from such incentives or otherwise.

Further positive action was taken with the introduction of the law to regulate the compulsory addition of one member with disabilities to various entities which are governed by Maltese Law. This law seeks to integrate more people with disabilities into the various entities present in the Maltese legal and governmental system by way of a provision in which at least one disabled person must be part of the major public entities/authorities (as specified above under Section 5) governed by Maltese Law.

11 SENSITIVE OR CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES

11.1 Potential breaches of the directives (if any)

There are some instances under Maltese law where national provisions are more restrictive in scope than the provisions of the directives. Hence, in these instances, national legislation does not conform to the provisions of the directives.

The prohibition of instruction to discriminate under the Equal Treatment of Persons Order is more restrictive than under the provisions of the directive. In essence, the order prohibits instructions to harassment but not (explicitly) instructions to discriminate. There are no provisions prohibiting instructions to discriminate on the grounds of racial/ethnic origin in the fields outside employment covered by Directive 2000/43/EC.<sup>189</sup>

Likewise, the same Order provides a more restrictive reference under Article 2(3) when referring to the treatment being legitimate and objective as the criteria to determine a genuine occupational requirement.<sup>190</sup>

The Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations appear to conform with Article 4(2) of Council Directive 2000/78/EC, except for the fact that national regulations provide for an ethos based on religion or religious belief, while the directive provides for an ethos based on religion or other belief. Accordingly, Maltese regulations do not regulate an ethos which is based on a belief which is not religious.<sup>191</sup>

Furthermore, it is worth noting that the duty to provide reasonable accommodation only applies in the field of employment. The provisions of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act 2000 apply to the employment of employees with disabilities to the exclusion of job applicants. Similarly, under the terms of the Equal Treatment in Employment Regulations 2004, issued under the Employment and Industrial Relations Act, 'employers shall provide reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities. In particular, employers shall take appropriate measures to enable a person with a disability to have access to, participate, or advance in employment, or to undergo training unless such measures would impose a disproportionate burden on the employer: provided that this burden is not disproportionate when it is sufficiently remedied by measures existing within the framework of the national disability policy.' What must be kept in mind here is that these measures refer to employees and do not cover 'job applicants', and local law would have been in breach of the directive were it not for the protection afforded under the UNCRPD.<sup>192</sup>

In addition, in terms of the Equality for Men and Women Act, any treatment based on a provision, criterion or practice which would put people at a particular disadvantage compared with people of the other sex or another sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, racial or ethnic origin, gender identity, gender expression or sex characteristics is deemed discriminatory, unless the said provision, criterion or practice is appropriate and necessary and can be justified by objective factors unrelated to sex. It is relevant to point out here that, despite the extension of the definition of discrimination in 2012 to grounds other than gender, the justification test is limited to factors unrelated to sex. It is not clear whether the omission was accidental or deliberate. A similar exclusion is not found in the directives.<sup>193</sup>

11.2 Other issues of concern

There do not seem to be any key issues of concern with regard to the implementation and practical application of the anti-discrimination directives at the national level, other than perhaps a low number of cases being brought forward. The absence of case law could, in the past, have been caused by people's lack of awareness of their rights. However, the state, through its departments and agencies as well as the various NGOs, has in the recent past developed and run various campaigns (written, audio and visual), to disseminate information and to create more awareness among the general public, thus indirectly encouraging people to come forward with any complaints they may have. In practice, however, this has not led to an increase in the number of complaints being brought forward. The Government also put forward the Equality Act to provide for an all-pervading legislation on equality and more clarity in anti-discrimination cases.

12 LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN 2018

12.1 Legislative amendments

In 2018 there were no important legislative amendments adopted in Malta in anti-discrimination law. Reference shall be made to new laws which make reference to the prohibition of discrimination.

2018 saw the introduction of the Work-Based Learning and Apprenticeship Act 2018<sup>194</sup> which regulates work-based learning and apprenticeships within the context of vocational educational and training programmes. People who have attained school leaving age as defined by the Education Act shall be eligible to enrol for work placements, apprenticeships and internships in accordance with this Act. Sponsors must ensure that the learners' wellbeing is safeguarded and that they are trained in an environment that is free from discrimination, workplace bullying or harassment and ensure that entry requirements and the selection of learners are equitable and free from discrimination on the grounds of: age, belief, creed and/or religion, colour, ethnic origin and/or race, disability, family responsibilities and /or pregnancy, family and/or civil status, gender expression and/or gender identity, genetic features, health status, political opinion, sex and/or sex characteristics and sexual orientation.

2018 also saw the introduction of the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act.<sup>195</sup> The purpose of the Act is to make provision for the substantive articles of the Council of Europe Convention on prevention and combating of violence against women and domestic violence to become, and be, enforceable as part of the Laws of Malta; to promote and protect the right of everyone, and particularly of persons who are at risk of domestic violence, to live free from violence in both the public and private sphere. The implementation of the provisions of this Act, in particular measures to protect the rights of victims, shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as age; association with a national minority; belief, creed or religion; colour, ethnic origin and/or race; disability; family responsibilities and/or pregnancy; family and/or civil status; gender expression and/or gender identity; genetic features; health status; language; migrant or refugee status; national or social origin; political or other opinion; property; sex or sex characteristics; sexual orientation or any other status. The introduction of this law was needed as it gave further protection to victims of domestic violence and gender-based violence, also indirectly encouraging more victims of abuse to come forward.

Brief summary: This judgement concerns an appeal made by the Minister for Transport and Infrastructure, the Attorney General and the Authority for Transport in Malta regarding the judgement delivered by the First Hall, Civil Court on 13 October 2016.

The claimants were employed as licensed port foremen, and consequent to a reform at the Maltese ports in 2007, retirement age for foremen was fixed at age 61. At the time, foremen were considered to be self-employed and, therefore, their licence had to be renewed yearly. The claimants alleged that the Government had not treated other foremen in the same manner when they offered the foremen who had not accepted the retirement scheme, which they had accepted, the option of renewing their licence.

The claimants had received a notice from the Malta Maritime Authority whereby they were given the possibility of early retirement at the age of 55 which they felt they were constrained to accept. The foremen alleged that their rights safeguarded under Articles 37 and 45 of the Constitution and Article 14 and the first Protocol of the European Convention on Human Rights were being infringed. The first court referred to Directive 2000/78/EC and Directive 2000/43/EC and stated that discrimination can occur on the basis of age. However, the court held that in such cases, a comparison must be made between all the foremen working at the port (and not between other self-employed workers), and thus concluded that discrimination had taken place. The first court also held that the licence issued to the foremen should be considered as a 'possession' in terms of the Convention. Consequently, it compelled the Minister for Transport and Infrastructure to pay each of the claimants, EUR 186 350 as compensation for loss of their licence and their earnings, and a further EUR 2 000 each as compensation for non-pecuniary damages.

Whilst the Constitutional Court confirmed that the amendment introduced in the reform stipulating that the claimants had to retire upon reaching the statutory pensionable age was illegitimate because it was not introduced as per proper legal procedure, it noted that the retirement scheme simply stated that the foremen could retire before that age and did not impose any obligations upon them. Therefore, the court concluded that the nullity of the amendment regarding the pensionable age should not also lead to the nullity of the retirement scheme. The court reiterated that, as noted by the first court, discrimination could take place when equal cases of people in equal circumstances are treated differently when there is no objective or reasonable basis for such different treatment or if there is no reasonable proportionality between the measures utilised and the desired purpose. Discrimination could hence take place when distinctions are made on the basis of age. Since the foremen were all below the age of 61, the Constitutional Court noted that the claimants could all be issued with a licence. It was the claimants who had chosen to give up their licence upon accepting the retirement scheme. Therefore, it held that the circumstances of the claimants' case did not constitute a violation of Article 45 of the Constitution and Article 14 of the Convention upon comparison with the other foremen because, in actual fact, they had all been treated in the same manner.

Name of the court: Court of Appeal (Civil, Superior)

Date of decision: 2 March 2018

Name of the parties: Mario Camilleri v. Kap Kmandant tal-Forzi Armati

Reference number: 270/2005/2

Address of the webpage:

<https://ecourts.gov.mt/onlineservices/Judgements/Details?JudgementId=0&CaseJudgementId=110684>

Brief summary: The claimant had been employed with the Armed Forces since 1987 and on 3 November 1988 he suffered an injury while performing his work which caused him to lose his left eye. Despite this, the claimant continued to work with the Armed Forces and carried out his work diligently. Due to the incident, the claimant was exempt from going to the shooting range. However, the defendant, representing the Armed Forces, demanded that the claimant recommence his training at the shooting range as this was not compatible with his disability and the claimant's refusal resulted in his expulsion from the army.

The claimant argued that such termination was discriminatory in terms of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act<sup>196</sup>. The first court noted that the claimant failed to prove that he suffered some form of discrimination as stipulated by law under Articles 3 to 7 of the said Act. In addition, no proof was brought that any individual had ever been granted a similar exemption from shooting. Even people placed on 'light duties' were obliged to perform gun training according to the regulations of the Armed Forces. The first court further noted that Directive 2000/78/EC, in paragraph 18, does not require the Armed Forces to recruit or maintain in employment people who do not have the required capacity to carry out the range of functions that they may be called upon to perform with regard to the legitimate objective of preserving the operational capacity of those services. However, the first court also noted that the Armed Forces could have offered the claimant a form of psychological help for him to overcome his fears linked to his disability and failed to help him resume his duties completely. Considering the exceptional circumstances in this case, the first court ordered each party to pay the costs respectively. The Court of Appeal rejected the appellant's (claimant) appeal and confirmed the judgement of the first court.

<sup>197</sup> Dr Andrew Azzopardi from the Maltese Ministry of Foreign Affairs Legal Department confirms that, as a general rule, treaties, conventions or international instruments signed and/or ratified by Malta may not be directly relied upon in domestic courts by individuals, unless they are transposed and/or adopted into Maltese Law. Generally, this transposition is very rarely done. An example is the transposition of the Council of Europe Convention on Prevention and Combating of Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul, 1 August 2014) into the Council of Europe Convention on Prevention and Combating of Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Ratification) Act (Chap 532 of the Laws of Malta) in 2014. [The latter and the Domestic Violence Act (Chapter 481 of the Laws of Malta) were eventually repealed by Act XIII of 2018, which made provisions for the substantive articles of the Council of Europe Convention on Prevention and Combating of Violence against Women and Domestic Violence enforceable as part of the Laws of Malta, mainly through the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act, 2018 (Chapter 581 of the Laws of Malta).]

As a matter of policy, Maltese law is generally amended so as to reflect the provisions of any convention or international instrument that Malta is intending to sign or ratify. Therefore, as a matter of policy, broadly, Maltese law is in line with all the conventions or other international instruments that it chooses to sign or ratify. This means that individuals may rely, persuasively, on the international instrument in domestic courts and mention the relevant international instrument in domestic courts. However, the corresponding Maltese law relating to the provisions of that international instrument should also be directly relied on in domestic courts by individuals, primarily.
